No Core, No War

A small boy, asked for the core of his apple, said: "There ain't going to be no core."

Laval, French premier, tired of dangerous goings on in the Mediterranean, important backdoor of France, announces bluntly, "There ain't going to be no war," requesting England to remove her battleships from the Mediterranean.

The wise British have known all along that there was to be no war, but thought it well to indulge in virtuous demonstrations.

Britons rarely make diplomatic mistakes. Diplomats of other countries are children to them, although France is an exception to that rule.

Washington believes the war will end in sixty days, and has probably been told so by somebody in Europe.

The Italian government sent to the council of the League of Nations photographs of proceedings in the "ancient civilization of Ethiopia," showing a miserable creature held down while his right hand was cut off for theft; others, with both hands cut off for stealing; debtors, owing trifling amounts, with both wrists chained to their ankles so that they could not stand straight.

These were "mild" photographs of that "ancient civilization." Others could not be published or even described; horrible, actual photographs, showing small Ethiopian boys, captured from a neighboring tribe, held struggling by powerful men, during a dreadful process of mutilation practiced upon them.

Photographs can lie, but these photographs tell the truth.

Emil Ludwig, well-known writer, who dropped in yesterday, remarked that his travels in Ethiopia, preparing his book on "The Life of the River Nile," enabled him to say that the photographs were only too accurate.

Some think it sad that Mussolini should end a government descended from the Queen of Sheba and King Solomon. Others think it certainly for Mussolini or anybody to end a "civilization" under which little boys are horribly mutilated, their captors laughing during the process.

Cleaning out a rattlesnake's den would be criminal compared with clearing out the hideous brutalities of Ethiopian savagery.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, announces "all signals set for increased automobile sales next year," and NO DOUBT ABOUT IT.

He approves an automobile show in November, instead of January, as giving the people more time to realize that the important car is the winter car, when the automobile "wears the rubbers" for the whole family.

Mr. Sloan spoke at a dinner given by Mr. Klingler for nine hundred Pontiac dealers. Mr. Klingler has transferred to the automobile business Danton's motto, "Audacity, more audacity, always audacity," and announced an increase of more than fifty per cent in his output for the coming year.

All good news, since automobile prosperity is the best gauge of general prosperity.

Mr. Ditmars, of New York's Bronx Zoo, reports arrival of four vampire bats. These winged mammals nurse their young, have bodies as big as a large rat, and live on blood. A sarcastic New York banker suggests that these bats be used to test the typical taxpayer and find if he has any blood left. If not, the bats will take mouse blood, although they prefer man's.

While Mussolini's son-in-law, with three planes from the death's head squadron, was bombing an Ethiopian ammunition cache, his brother-in-law, Bruno Mussolini, 24, was learning about Ethiopian war methods. Flying over Makale, he saw a white flag of truce. Flew low to investigate, and was met by "rifle fire from a column of uniformed Ethiopian soldiers" rising from the ground. The young flier returned twice to investigate more closely, with new rifle fire each time. Four bullets hit the plane, no harm done.

Karl Von Wiegand describes Emperor Selassie practicing marksmanship in Addis Ababa, some distance from the front. Those allowed to compete in the contest were all "dukes, princes and barons." The Emperor won his own first prize. "He likes to shoot his name in Amharic letters with machine gun bullets."

Von Wiegand says: "Radio operators in the American navy arrived in Addis Ababa to install a radio transmitting set in the American legation for direct communication with Washington."

That should help news reporting.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, in His First Address as President to the Semi-Annual Meeting of the Business Organization of the Government. WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 21, 1924

"There is scarcely an economic ill anywhere in our country that cannot be traced directly or indirectly to high taxes. To increase that burden is to disregard the general welfare. Through constructive economy, to decrease taxes is to enlarge the reward of everyone who toils."

Navy Probes Marine's Death

BEATEN, BODY HURLED INTO CHARLES

Police gathered new murder evidence today for a naval board of inquiry convened in Chelsea Naval Hospital to investigate the mystery death of Mack H. Hendrix, Marine Corps private.

The uniformed body of Hendrix, 22, a native of Trion, Ga., was found last night in Charles river under the Warren avenue bridge, Charlestown.

The skull was crushed and the neck broken. The victim was apparently beaten and hurled from the bridge.

ON DUTY AT DOCKS

Hendrix was stationed on duty at the navy docks in South Boston. He went on liberty October 5 and was due back at his post October 7.

His uniform hat, it was revealed, was found last Sunday night in Portland street, not far from the bridge.

The hat, picked up by a Division 1 patrolman, has been turned over to Navy officials.

William J. Brickley, medical examiner, who performed an autopsy, found no symptoms of alcoholism. He said that the marine was probably dead before his body entered the river.

Although the unusually severe injuries indicated the possibility that Hendrix had been hit by an automobile, this theory was entirely discounted by the fact that his uniform was neither torn nor soiled—his sharpshooter's medal was still pinned to the tunic—and he suffered no injuries except those to the skull and neck vertebrae.

THOSE ON BOARD

Rear Admiral Walter R. Gherardi, navy yard commandant, named the following to the board of inquiry: Major Robert E. Hill, U. S. M. C.; Captain Edgar C. Kirkpatrick, U. S. M. C., and Lieutenant C. E. Bestell, U. S. N. Medical Corps.

Hendrix told friends, when leaving the South Boston dock, that he intended to visit the Navy Yard but so far as could be learned he did not appear there.

The victim, a big youth with a happy disposition and pleasing personality, was popular in the corps.

He enlisted in Macon, Ga., April 14, 1934, and came on duty here on June 22, last, detached in dry dock at the Navy Yard and later assigned to the South Boston pier.

SAUGUS FLAG 'REBELS' BALK AT TEST

At the test ordered by the school committee, seven Saugus school children continued today to refuse to salute the American flag.

An eighth who had previously refused capitulated on the order of her father, a war veteran.

The school board will hold a special meeting tonight to decide what disciplinary action is to be taken.

The board is expected to vote to exclude the children from classes until they agree to salute.

CHILD BRINGS NOTE

Virginia Messenger, eighth grade pupil in the Central Junior high school and daughter of Carl R. Messinger, war veteran, stood with her class and abstained after delivering this note, signed by herself, to her teacher:

"I have pledged my allegiance to God in the new kingdom with all my heart.

"But my father has ordered me to salute the flag. I am under age and so I will obey my father."

Virginia and the other children are members of Jehovah's Witnesses, a religious group which holds allegiance should be only to God.

The children refusing again today to participate in the class salute were: Costa Mitchell, 12; Constance Mitchell, 10; Philemon and Philip Mitchell, nine year-old twins; Shirley Goff, 12, and Fred Goff, Jr., 13, and Barbara Henderson, eight.

FOLLOW LYNN LEAD

The Mitchell children and Shirley Goff are pupils in the Roby school. Fred Goff attends Central High school and Barbara Henderson, Ballard school.

Refusal of the Saugus children to salute followed the similar action by Carleton B. Nichols, Jr., Lynn schoolboy. He has been excluded from classes and has a tutor at home.

Hurley Shifted To Railway Mails

Washington, Oct. 16—William E. Hurley, who was replaced as postmaster of Boston by Edward F. Tague, has been transferred to the railway mail service.

Hurley, a Republican career man, requested that he be assigned to the railway service because, Post Office department officials explained, it would permit him to retire at an earlier date than otherwise. The department said his application had been adopted.

U. S. ASKED TO CUT ITALIAN IMPORTS

WAR BULLETINS

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

London, Oct. 16—Premier Mussolini will go to Ethiopia and direct the Italian invasion personally as soon as he feels his nation is safe from European molestation, International News Service learned today.

Paris, Oct. 16 (AP)—Officials disclosed today that France and Great Britain are asking Washington if the United States is willing to restrict its imports from Italy in case such penalty against Mussolini is applied by the League. (Page 9.)

Diredawa, Ethiopia, Oct. 16 (INS)—Raining 300 bombs on the southeastern towns of Taffara and Khatma, Italian airplanes today were reported to have killed five Abyssinians and wounded 20. Pilots of two Italian planes were said to have been taken prisoners after their machines were forced down.

Ethiopian Tribesmen Invade Italian Somaliland

By Associated Press

Djibouti, French Somaliland, 5:50 p. m. Tuesday, Oct. 15 (Delayed in transmission)—Four thousand Ethiopian tribesmen, led by Colonel Siwiank, the Dutch veteran of the Boer war, have invaded Italian Somaliland and reported today an advance of 45 miles.

Colonel Siwiank reported he and his men went into the Italian colony at Dolo near the Kenya frontier and had captured the town of Lugh.

It was Dolo that the Italians claimed to have captured 10 days ago.

A second and larger force of Ethiopians are crossing over the Italian Somaliland frontier midway between Tenlo and the Webbe Shibely River, occupying Oddur, about 45 miles south of the Ethiopian frontier.

Somali tribes were said to be joining the invaders in support of their old grievances against the Italians which have been intensified by the reports out of Ethiopia that non-combatants had suffered casualties through air bombing raids.

An even greater menace than these two strong raiding parties against the Italian troops under

400 Flee Barrel Fire in Cambridge

Approximately 400 persons, mostly women and children, temporarily abandoned their homes in East Cambridge today when a spectacular fire destroyed a barrel plant and threatened to develop into a conflagration.

After an hour's battle, firemen confirmed the flames in the two story warehouse of Young-Curley-Larkin Co., Inc., Gore street, near Lechmere square.

Rows of three-tenement houses, the lumber plant of John P. Squires Co. and the barrel plant of Chapper & Rosen, all in close proximity, were threatened.

The damage was $7000, the cause not immediately determined.

Two alarms were sounded, the first by Vincent Graffia, 10-year-old pupil in St. Francis' School, who sighted the flames from his home in Gore street which finishing lunch with his mother, Mrs. Florence Graffia, and two younger brothers. He ran two blocks to sound the alarm — then went to school.

ITALY SPURNS PEACE NOW IN RACE AGAINST TIME

AIMS TO HOLD ALL LAND SEIZED IN WAR DRIVE

France's ultimatum to Italy that acceptance by Mussolini of an Ethiopian peace guaranteeing independence of that country must come within ten days or France will join England in enforcement of "firm penalties," was the spur driving the Roman Legions on today.

By age old precedent ground held by a conquering force almost always remains in the possession of the holder when combatants and arbiters sit around a peace table.

Italy, in undisputed possession of a strip of Ethiopia from the Red Sea to the Indian Ocean, joining Italian Eritrea with Italian Somaliland and cutting off both British and French Somaliland from the rich but undeveloped mineral and other wealth of interior Ethiopia, would hold a strong hand in peace negotiations.

Italy, possessed of the junction strip, might make certain concessions to both France and Britain.

Italy, obviously, is racing against time.

Up to Duce, Says France

By International News Service

Geneva, Oct. 16—While Britain openly showed her complete lack of confidence in France's new peace moves by urging an economic boycott of Italy, the October 25 "deadline" fixed by Premier Pierre Laval for Premier Mussolini to start talking peace before economic sanctions are applied, hurtled nearer today with no word from Il Duce.

Britain felt there was little hope that Mussolini would halt his troops now, and shared the insistence of Ethiopians that there could be no settlement while Italian forces remain on Ethiopian soil.

French observers indicated that the next move was up to Mussolini to accept or reject the proposals set forth by Laval in his talk with the Italian Ambassador, Vittorio Cerruti, as a basis for discussion, or advance other suggestions.

LIKE LEAGUE PLAN

The French suggestions, it was authoritatively stated, contain some elements of the "basis for discussion" scheme drawn up weeks ago by the League of Nations council's committee of five and rejected by Italy, together with some of the hints dropped by Italy as Mussolini's "minimum requirements."

First of all, the French are said to have proposed, Italy's troops must halt where they are, and all negotiations are to be conducted through the League of Nations.

An autonomous province would be created in Tigre, North Ethiopia, and placed under Italy's protection. Harar and Ogaden provinces in the southeast would be ceded to Italy, also a zone connecting Eritrea and Italian Somaliland west of Addis Ababa.

GIVEN CORRIDOR TO SEA

Ethiopia proper, the ancient kingdom in the heart of the present area, would be placed under League supervision, with predominance of Italian interests recognized, according to the French outline.

Ethiopia would then be given a corridor to the sea by cession to her of the port of Zeila, in the British Somaliland protectorate.

In previous discussions, Italy opposed the latter suggestion, arguing that a seaport would enable Ethiopia to bring in arms and ammunitions with which to "endanger Italy."

Rome Sees No Peace

By Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 16—A government spokesman stated today that Italy was well aware of Premier Laval's efforts for a peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict—but doubted that the French statesman would succeed.

Italian officials were in agreement with Premier Mussolini's determination to conquer Ethiopia, no matter what happens.

The government spokesman said that Italy was not a party to any peace negotiations and had made no compromise offers to anyone.

In view of Great Britain's attitude, he added, the Italian government regarded the possibility of there being any diplomatic solution acceptable to Italy as "remote."

The authoritative opinion was that Great Britain would yield no more to Italy than she previously had offered—"and why should we accept today what we rejected several weeks ago?" asked the official.

He declared that Italy was in a much better position today in view of her military successes in Ethiopia than at the time of the tripartite conversations in Paris last month with France and Great Britain.

In any case, it was officially explained, no settlement would be acceptable which did not satisfy Italy's three demands: Expansion, safety of her colonies, and the complete disarmament of Ethiopia.

Bay State Loses Nine CCC Camps

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 16—Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, announced today members on October 10 totalled 440,000, 1000 above of the strength fixed by President Roosevelt.

"I am confident," Fechner said, "that enrollments in the next two weeks will bring us to the full 500,000 on November 1."

As an example of changes in the setup brought by the decision to hold the Corps to 500,000, Fechner said, Massachusetts would have 51 camps instead of the 60 originally planned.

DUCE TO LEAD ITALY'S ARMY

General Graziani in Italian Somaliland was an advance by Ras Desta's army of 100,000 men down the valley of the Webbe Shibeli toward the left flank of the Italian army.

Graziani thus far has made his main thrust along the British Somaliland frontier to his north but it has yielded no additional ground.

TANKS HOLD BASES

Siwank is well known in Italian Somaliland, for he owns a great estate there. He long has been established as an opponent of Italian rule.

Graziani's tanks are still holding the bases southwest of Bohotleh, but the Ethiopians claim that their infantry has stricken the wells at Udi, driving back the mechanized Italian front and disabling three tanks.

Italian airplanes bombed Gerlogubi again today, then dropped bombs on Gorsa and Handamara and destroyed the radio station at Mudleh.

Reports from Ethiopian sources claim that some of the air bombs dropped around Gerlogubi were charged with gas.

Selassie Sets Trap For Advancing Italians

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Oct. 16—Emperor Haile Selassie proclaimed today that Ethiopia is undefeated on any front.

Italian occupation of Aduwa and Aksum, he declared, was without military significance, the Ethiopians having withdrawn for special strategic reasons.

The Emperor asserted the Fascists were permitted to enter these cities on the northern front unopposed, that no decisive battle had yet been fought and that none would be until the Italians approached Ethiopia's real defensive positions in the towering mountains of the interior.

Ethiopian authorities expressed belief that Italy's northern army was slowly but surely falling into a trap.

Ethiopians said it would not be long before General Emilio de Bono's Fascist forces, jubilant over the "capture" of Aduwa and Aksum, would find themselves lost in the maze of ravines, cavernous valleys and mountain fastnesses which form the northern bulwark of Emperor Selassie's domain.

On all sides the comment was heard that once the Italians reached the forbidding interior of Ethiopia, the warriors of Ras Seyoum, commander in the north, would waste no time in carrying out a long cherished plan of attack.

Capital advices, however, indicated that both the Italian and Ethiopian forces were playing for time, each wondering what the other's next move would be.

Dispatches from the Italian side on the northern front said that with a road constructed to Aduwa, the Fascists were ready to resume their advance on Makale, 60 miles deeper into Ethiopia.

Considerable misgiving prevailed in Ethiopian circles here for the safety of Harar, "Garden of Ethiopia" and strategic city behind the southern lines, which it was feared would be the next target of Italian bombing planes.

Concern also was felt for the ability of the Ethiopian forces on the southern Ogaden desert front to hold out against the strong drive to the north from Italian Somaliland by the Italian troops under General Rudolfo Graziani.

One Ethiopian commander in the south appealed to Harar and to Addis Ababa for help. Troops rushed toward that front to lend support.

While the Ethiopian warriors were becoming accustomed to the bursting of bombs, they were still bewildered at the speed with which the Italian armored cars dashed over the roughest terrain.

Natives in Festive Mood As Italians Seize Aksum

Asmara, Eritrea, Oct. 16 (Stefani Agency)—Italian troops marched into the Holy City of Aksum, Ethiopia, yesterday while an Italian airplane circled overhead.

Previously the Fascist troops had merely encircled the city, remaining outside its walls.

(Earlier dispatches from within Ethiopia indicated that Italian troops might not set foot within Aksum.)

Possession of the town was taken by the sixth battalion of Italian native infantry, which entered the city preceded by a squad of armored cars and followed by three batteries of field pieces.

Aksum fell into Italian hands without a shot being fired, and the population made it a festival occasion.

The airplane which circled over the town landed just outside the city and the field where it came to rest was taken over as an airfield, capable of accommodating the several squadrons of planes which will be stationed there.

The Ethiopians had established a large grain reserve in the captured area in preparation for war and Gen. Emilio De Bono, commander of the expeditionary force, immediately ordered this supply distributed among the people—who received it enthusiastically.

50-Mile Barrier Built Across Italian Line

By International News Service

London, Oct. 16—Large scale Ethiopian defensive works have been stretched as a 50-mile barrier across the line the Italians must take in their advance toward Addis Ababa, Exchange Telegraph's correspondent with the northern Italian army radioed today.

Latest reconnaissance flight south of Makale revealed strong defenses, including deep trenches, concrete pill-boxes and machine gun posts extending from Amba Alagi to Sokota, about 100 miles south of Aduwa.

Messages from the Somaliland division of the army, said the Exchange dispatch, revealed that Italian planes had bombed Abyssinian positions at Dolo, Gerlogubi, Dagneri and Burcodi, all in south and southeastern Ethiopia, and returned safely to their bases despite shots from Abyssinian rifles and anti-aircraft guns.

LEAGUE, NOT ITALY, MUST WIN WAR, SAYS BRITAIN

By International News Service

London, Oct. 16—Great Britain today pushed to the limit its drive for the penalization of Italy for going to war against Ethiopia.

While the British cabinet met to discuss the crisis, semiofficial quarters in London indicated the government felt it now "has the jump" on Italy and is determined not to give in one inch to Premier Mussolini.

This, it was said in high quarters, goes for the question of penalties as well as for all peace proposals now suggested.

The cabinet, it was made known officially, instructed Sir George Clerk, British ambassador to Paris, to inform Premier Pierre Laval that Britain considers it necessary to maintain present fleet "precautions" in the Mediterranean.

This was an answer to all suggestions that Britain decrease her Mediterranean naval strength as a means of making Italy more conciliatory.

The British view is that if Premier Pierre Laval of France wishes to push peace negotiations, well and good, but the speed of the League of Nations sanctions machinery must not be slackened and any settlement at this stage must entirely avoid any possible "legalization" of the Italian advances into Ethiopia already made.

In other words, the government feels that if any results are to come from the current peace moves, they must come soon, for Britain intends to continue urging the League to use all possible haste in crippling Italy financially and economically with a view to forcing her to end her war.

The cabinet met for an hour, receiving a full report of the Monday conversations between Sir George Clerk, British ambassador to Paris, and Premier Pierre Laval, at which the French peace suggestions were offered.

As usual, the cabinet's decision was not disclosed. Naturally, Britain will listen to peace overtures, and informed quarters said the cabinet supported the French attempts to get Premier Mussolini to state his minimum demands.

BRITAIN STANDS PAT

However, Britain will agree to nothing which could be considered a defeat for the League.

The British feeling that Il Duce now is "on the run" was reflected in comment in the "Star," London Evening newspaper.

"Mussolini is getting cold feet again," said the paper. "That is why he is resorting to such grotesque devices as the dispatch to London of one of Garibaldi's grandsons to convert democratic opinion.

"Neutral diplomats, therefore, do not conceal their view that the right tactics to impress Il Duce are to make his feet even colder by accelerating and intensifying economic and, if necessary, naval pressure."

The Garibaldi referred to is General Erzio Garibaldi, grandson of the famous Italian warrior-patriot, here on a mysterious visit.

URGES SPEED AT GENEVA

The British stand on the penalties question was illustrated plainly at Geneva today when Captain Anthony Eden dramatically urged all possible speed in pushing sanctions into operation.

Penalties, according to the British view, should be pushed as far as possible "in order to give the world a taste of the League's authority."

Britain insists that the League, and not Italy, shall win the war.

In flatly denying France had asked Britain to withdraw her home fleet from the Mediterranean, official quarters made it clear that the present powerful British fleet in the Mediterranean must remain there until Britain is satisfied that Anglo-Italian good will is restored and until Anglo-Italian relations are put on a lasting basis of friendship.

Warn Britons in Ethiopia

By International News Service

London, Oct. 16—British subjects have been warned to leave Addis Ababa "before they risk interruption of movements to the coast," it was learned today following a meeting of the British cabinet on the East African crisis.

The warning was issued in the hope of mitigating the chances of diplomatic complications in the event of bombing of the Ethiopian capital by Italian planes.

Arms Ban OK'd By Vandenberg

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 16—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, home from a vacation in Europe, suggested today that the United States' neutrality policy be made "more emphatic."

But the Michigan Republican warned against considering the nation's new mandatory formula with its arms export ban as a buttress to League of Nations penalties.

Expressing "complete agreement" with the policy as proclaimed by the President, he said in a statement:

"If anything, I would make it more emphatic.

"It may deny us an expression of our natural sympathies in a given dispute, but it substantially insulates us against dreadful consequences which otherwise could embroil us again in alien wars.

"The loss of incidental commerce is infinitely less important than the maintenance of American peace."

REDS IN RIOT, 5 Shot in Athens

Athens, Oct. 16 (US) — Shots broke up an anti-Communist demonstration in Constitution square here and five persons, one a policeman, were wounded.

REUNITED BIGELOWS WAIT STORK

FLIER HOPES NEW HEIR IS BOY

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Models of domesticity, the Stephen Sohier Bigelows have adopted the simple life as they await the winter arrival of the stork.

Reconciled since last May, they admitted today they have forgotten marital mixups in the joy of preparation for the coming of their son (they hope) and heir.

It is a new experience for the former Mary McDevitt and her socialite husband, this sedate life at home, but they feel it is the only one to bring them true happiness.

Lounging in their comfortable Beacon street apartment, war-time aviator Bigelow spoke for both when he said:

"It is a second honeymoon. And we are happy. The reason we have had disagreements was that we didn't have anything with which to occupy ourselves.

"Now we will have the child and there is only happiness ahead."

Then facetiously, he added:

"I only hope the baby isn't quintuplets. Think of the expense of bringing them up."

The daughter of a Brighton deputy sheriff and the clubman have had a hectic married life up to now. Several times a divorce was contemplated and earlier in the year Mrs. Bigelow actually filed such an action.

The suit has been dropped, Bigelow said, and his wife smilingly nodded approval.

"You see Mary must remain indoors for the winter now that a son and heir is in the offing," Bigelow commented.

"I naturally want to remain with her. So we are going to be just married folks with evenings at home, early to bed and earlier to rise."

The new "love nest" is large and decidedly feminine, her own influence, Mrs. Bigelow admitted.

"But that is as it should be," the happy husband said. "Mary has to stay in it such a long time I left it all to her."

COW'S Love Life TOLD

RAW DEALERS STUDY MILK

By Universal Service

Washington, Oct., 16—Declaring the milk business has become a gigantic monopoly, Dr. Walton Hale Hamilton of Yale is soon to place before President Roosevelt the suggestion the government make milk a public utility such as water, gas and electricity.

The amazing report Dr. Hamilton is completing puts the milk industry through an inquisitorial churn.

It delves into the love life of cows and has a despraging reference to goats and the way they smell.

Milk-Minded

There are notations on how Americans have been milk-minded and a hint that, in some future day, food pills made by superchemists will be the manna of mankind, or perhaps a shot in the arm will constitute a full meal.

Dr. Hamilton, former Yale economist, is special advisor to the President on consumer problems. His assistants and he are seeking to show Mr. Roosevelt how consumption of basic commodities can be increased.

In the case of milk, the report reveals this may be difficult. The farmer and the milkman nowadays have nothing to say about the sale and distribution of the milk 25,000,000 cows give daily.

A small group controls the industry, the report charges. They have energetically put over "use more milk" campaigns. The problem, the report says lies in distribution, costs varying from 3.5 to 1.25 per quart.

While the British still regard milk as a "degrading tipple for the full-blooded English he-man," Americans of all ages go in for milk, the report states.

The word milk in the U. S. A. means "cow's milk" the report points out, explaining that, what with modern life, "the tendency is increasingly away from mother's milk."

Goats Smell

There is some goat's milk, but "it has been claimed milking goats is a harder job because they refuse to set back the right hind foot in the way cows do." The report adds goat experts are indignant over the "insidious rumor" that goat milk has an offensive odor.

As to cow's milk consumption, a quart for every child and a pint for every adult a day is estimated. As for production, a good Jersey cow "can nonchalantly toss off 20,000 pounds of milk (8306 quarts) and 1000 pounds of butter fat a year." A Holstein can even beat that.

This, the report says, is because "calm, serene, content to munch and contemplate, the cow is ideal for placid milk production."

Bride at $50,000 Wedding

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Today, she's Lady Norton-Griffiths, wife of Sir Peter Norton-Griffiths, London barrister. Yesterday, she was Miss Kathryn Schrafft, candy fortune heiress and daughter of Mrs. George Frederick Schrafft of Newton. Here is the bride as she left her automobile to enter Grace Episcopal Church, Newton, where the $50,000 wedding had its ceremonious setting.

HUGS For Husband ONLY

WIFE DENIES "OTHER MAN"

Her husband's cruelty and not her own conduct with another man broke up the Braintree home of Mrs. Frances A. Coulahan, she testified today in Dedham probate court.

A bride at 16, Mrs. Coulahan, now 32, is suing to divorce Robert B. Coulahan, also of Braintree. She seeks alimony and custody of their children, Frances, 5, and Audrey, 2.

Although she is a striking brunette, her husband did all the striking, Mrs. Coulahan testified, once knocking her down, splitting her lip, blackening her eye so she had to take to bed.

Went Back

Twice, she said, he ordered her from home, the first time because she had their first child baptized in the Catholic church, the second time last May after she asked him for money.

A reconciliation followed the first separation but, she said, he continued to quarrel with her and to gamble.

She testified that the second time he ordered her out he told her she could get a divorce but that he'd kill her and the children before she got the children; said, also, he was going to drive to New Hampshire with the children and didn't care whether they all went over a cliff.

She went to her sister's house, she testified, and he followed her there, broke a window to get in and she fled in scant attire, to a neighboring house.

Denies Trysts

Under cross-examination by her husband's counsel, she said she knew a man named Clem Bianchini, denied ever visiting his house, riding with him nights and parking with him, denied all her arguments with her husband resulted from his complaints about her conduct with Bianchini.

She also denied ever telling her husband and his mother that, although she "kept company" with Bianchini, it did not necessarily mean she was in love with him.

Flees to Europe In Marital Break

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

New York, Oct. 16—Exiled the crown princess of New York-Newport society, Grace Vanderbilt Davis, has separated from her husband, young Henry Gassaway Davis, 3d—and a divorce is predicted.

Grace Vanderbilt Davis has more or less been secretly whisked away from the U. S. A. by her mother, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr.

At last midnight, Mrs. Vanderbilt and Grace were steaming past the Statue of Liberty aboard the Europa, with nary so much as a spoken or a telegraphed "bon voyage" from the sad and disillusioned grandson and namesake of the late U. S. Senator Henry Gassaway Davis, who once was the Democratic nominee for the vice-presidency of the United States.

While his wife and mother-in-law were walking up the gangplank, he was at the fashionable hotel in midtown New York where he established headquarters a week or so ago.

Young Mr. Davis declined to affirm or deny that he and his rich and socially consequential wife had separated or that a divorce was being arranged.

Haverhill School Bus Crash, 8 Hurt

Haverhill, Oct. 16—Eight children were injured, a dozen severely shaken, when a school bus collided with a truck here today. The truck driver was charged with being under the influence of liquor.

None of the score of children in the bus was seriously hurt. The crash occurred at Monument square and North Broadway.

Treated by physicians at the scene of the accident were Frances Giles, 13, of Crystal street, who suffered a badly cut leg; Virginia Chilpian, North Broadway; Robert Culligan, 8, North Broadway; Lorraine Marcotte, 12, and her brother, Norman, 10, of North Broadway; Robert Rheume, 10, Lake street; Robert Lanen, 9, North Broadway, and Lillian St. Louis, 12, Lake street.

Joseph Dufresne, of Hilldale avenue, driver of the truck, was found guilty in district court of driving under the influence and fined $50. He appealed.

LOST FISHERS FOUND

2 Days Without Food or Water

Gloucester, Oct. 16—Missing since Monday morning in their 40-foot fishing boat, their engine disabled and without food or water, Fred R. Woodard, 26, and Gordon Rich, 22, both of Ring's Island, Salisbury, were rescued today.

They were brought to this port by the lobster boat Chester P. Marshall, which picked them up near Isle of Shoals Coast Guard station.

Both were in critical condition from exposure and hunger.

Starting from Salisbury Monday to fill a fish order, Rich and Woodard in their haste forgot food and water.

Then, on the third drag of their large net, the propellor became entangled, a rudder bolt snapped off and they were helpless.

Attempts to hoist a sail were only partly successful and a high wind made managing the sail impossible.

Late in the afternoon they drifted within sight of the Isles of Shoals.

"We were suffering from hunger and the severe cold," Woodard said.

"Twice we saw other boats—a small cabin cruiser and a schooner—but we could not attract attention, though we yelled and waved our heads off. The second day was worse—no water or food."

John Kershaw, owner of the John K, had been reported also as being with Woodard and Rich, but he did not make the trip.

The father of Woodard was in Gloucester to greet his son.

He complained over the failure of the Isle of Shoals coast guard to find the little fishing craft.

Crippled Trawler Arrives in Port

With her engine and pilot house badly battered by a northerly gale the Boston trawler, Mary E. O'Hara, limped to the Fish Pier today from the Grand Banks.

In the gale, the coal barge Lieut. San Mendel, carrying 1400 tons from Norfolk, parted its line to the tug Wellfleet off Manomet and was sought today by Coast Guard planes and patrol boats. There was no one aboard.

Pet Dog Saves 19 in Lynn Fire

The barking of a pet dog saved 19 persons including 12 children from fire which swept a tenement on Blossom street, Lynn, today.

The dog awakened Mrs. Amelia Romano, on the first floor who roused the other residents. Damage was estimated at $5000.

Arlington Man Dies in Cell

James J. Mahoney, 61, of 10 Avon place, Arlington, was found dead today in a cell in the Milk street station by Patrolman Francis Smith.

Mahoney was lying face down on the floor of the cell with an abrasion over his eye and on his nose. At the Haymarket square relief station he was pronounced dead.

Mahoney had been arrested on a charge of drunkenness early in the evening.

Police officials will hold an investigation this morning.

64 MORE COLLECTION FIRMS NAMED IN NEW CHARGES

Continuing his drive against collection agencies that he terms illegal, Attorney General Paul A. Dever today filed 64 more informations in the Supreme Judicial Court seeking injunctions to restrain such firms from continuing business.

Of these filed today 31 name Boston firms, eight Springfield agencies and five firms each in Worcester and New Bedford.

Decrees, virtually banning collection agencies in any form in the state and covering lawyers, corporations and individuals operating under trade names, were issued by Judge Frank Donahue yesterday against 33 such agencies.

The first move in Dever's war against collection agencies came September 20 in the filing of a petition by Assistant Attorney General Maurice Goldman asking for 61 injunctions.

It followed an investigation by Goldman of hundreds of complaints from persons who claimed to have been forced to pay excessive fees to agencies and who were threatened with legal-appearing documents presented, in many cases, by bogus constables.

Barking Dog Sent To Farm by Court

Judge Ralph W. Reeve has sent a lot of bothersome prisoners to the farm but today was the first time he ever banished a dog to pastoral surroundings.

Prince, a barking Spitz, was the dog. Its master, Joseph Wilkish of Holyoke street, Lynn, was before Lynn court charged with failing to obey Police Chief James H. Broad's order to get rid of Prince. Neighbors testified Prince barked so nobody within a quarter-mile area could hear himself think.

Judge Reeve ordered Wilkish to send his noisy pet to a son's farm in Burlington, and continued the case until January 4. He said he did not want the dog destroyed.

Boy Returns $5000, Refuses Reward

Between $4000 and $5000 in checks, several of them made out to "cash," were found this morning by Frederick Livotte, 20, a newsboy, living at 1285 Commonwealth avenue, in front of a cafeteria in Harvard avenue, Allston.

The checks, clipped together and issued by an auto agency, bore the name of O. D. Davis, secretary of the concern. They were returned by Livotte—a Boston American newsboy. He disclaimed any desire for a reward.

LABOR BRANDS ITALY 'OUTLAW' ASSAILS WAR

By Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 16—The American Federation of Labor declared Italy an "outlaw nation" today and urged the countries of the world to deny her financial and commercial assistance in the Ethiopian conflict.

"The territory of a peaceful nation has been invaded," a statement adopted by the Federation convention said, "in order to carry out a policy of Fascist conquest.

"Our country was a leader in the movement which resulted in the Kellogg peace pact. The attack now being made on Ethiopia is in violation of the Kellogg pact."

APPROVES EMBARGO

The statement "emphatically approved" the neutrality policy of President Roosevelt and Congress and declared Italy "an outlaw nation which all civilized countries should refuse to assist commercially, financially or in any other manner."

Suggestions from the floor that the United States should adopt a stronger policy to bar shipment of materials to Italy and that the federation consider endorsement of the work of the committee for Ethiopian independence were rejected.

LABOR CHIEF VICTIM

The convention approved the action of the League of Nations against Italy.

"Labor is always the major sufferer in every war," the statement said, "this being true of victor and vanquished alike. The dictator's ((Mussolini)) determination to secure his objective through the use of armed force was taken with the knowledge that his act might precipitate a general war."

The pronouncement was prepared by the resolutions committee, reporting on sections of the executive council's report.

3 MILLION BOYS, GIRLS IN NEED

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 6—Between five and eight million young people of 18 to 25 years in this country are wholly unoccupied, and almost 3,000,000 of them are on relief, Aubrey Williams, executive of the $50,000,000 National Youth Administration, told the Welfare Council of New York City today.

"Seven hundred thousand young people had to quit last year before they had finished high school," Williams said.

"Last June hundreds of thousands of them were graduated from school and college into a labor market that was greatly surfeited.

"It is a cold and unwelcoming world that our young people are entering. It offers them little or nothing though they have much to give it if allowed the chance."

The purpose of the NYA, he said, is to aid as many of the young people as it can in continuing their education, in equipping themselves for employment, and providing employing, he added:

"It is begging the question to say that they should all be put back into school or college. They need jobs or training for jobs.

"We should seek to reorganize the world—its industries and institutions—in conformity with the aspirations and needs of the young people, so they may be given opportunities rather than blank walls, stagnation and exploitation. For the world, economically speaking, is man-made, and what man can make he can remake."

Injured Wellesley Star Given Blood

John E. Fenwick, 17, of Parker street, Wellesley High football captain-elect, was fighting for his life in Newton Hospital after a blood transfusion today.

He was seriously injured Saturday in the Natick-Wellesley game. His father, Frank Fenwick, was the donor of the blood. The boy is suffering from hemorrhage.

Threats Sent Girl In Winthrop

Threats of harm to the 14-year-old daughter of a Winthrop widow were revealed by police today.

The threats were made over the telephone Friday evening to Mrs. Helen B. Guptill, widow of the late Leon C. Guptill, former town counsel of Winthrop.

Since that time police have maintained a constant guard over her home in Bartlett road.

The daughter, Nancy, a student at Winthrop High School, is also being kept under watchful eyes. Her mother and police detectives accompany her whenever she leaves the house.

As a result of the threats neighbors are also worried, fearing a kidnaping or harm to their own children.

2 MOTHERS SAVE FOUR IN FIRE

A fire at the rear of 97 Cushing avenue, Dorchester, directly across from St. Margaret's Hospital, today, caused damage estimated at $4000 to the two family wooden dwelling occupied by the families of Melvin J. Linton and Willard Gallagher.

The strong north wind caused the blaze to spread across an alley to the rear of 107 Sawyer avenue, where Patrolman Michael E. Crowley lives.

Mrs. Linton succeeded in getting her two small children, Melvin, Jr., 4, and Sally Jane, 18 months old, out. Mrs. Gallagher fled with Willard, Jr., 3, and Patricia, also 18 months old.

Patients in St. Margaret's Hospital were not alarmed by the blaze.

Lady, with all the things you read and hear about coffee, we don't wonder you're confused.

The plain facts are that there is no such thing as one coffee that everyone likes. Even the people who make a business of tasting coffee don't agree!

For years we've been studying coffee—and New England's taste in coffee. We don't know which one of the three you'll like . . . but we're wagering you'll like one of them. They're New England Coffees—for New England people.

Coffee-roasters work with these three general types of coffee blends. There are dozens of variations on each type. Some people like one type—some like another. Everyone has a definite preference.

That's why we offer you your choice of three fine New England blends in Economy Stores. We don't know which one of the three you'll like . . . but we're wagering you'll like one of them. They're New England Coffees—for New England people.

MILLIKEN SAYS SHAKESPEARE FILM BEST

Characterizing the photoplay version of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" as an outstanding achievement in the progress of the screen, former Governor Carl E. Milliken of Maine today began a tour of large eastern cities as part of a program to promote interest in the great Shakespearian comedy.

The Warner Bros. production opens at the Majestic Theatre in Boston November 8, and is expected to establish a record run. It is regarded as the most elaborate undertaking of its kind in the history of motion pictures and is particularly distinguished through the support given it by the Shakespeare Association of America.

Governor Milliken, now secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was delegated by Will Hays, president of the organization, to make the tour of Eastern states giving public endorsement of the film and assisting in every possible way to create public interest, particularly among school children.

CARL E. MILLIKEN
Named by Will Hays

"So many adjectives have been used in describing films we are unable to reach the heights of description which this Warner production merits," Milliken said today.

"Probably the simplest way to do so is to say that it is Shakespeare with Reinhardt's vision and the music of Mendelssohn.

"It has been said that Warner Bros. spent $1,500,000 in its production and drew from the world's greatest stage personalities to make it a real milestone in the progress of the motion picture industry.

"It is an event that challenges that public opinion which has demanded the highest artistry from the screen and important to those who have co-operated in the better picture movement in the United States."

The film was brought to Boston by the M. & P. Theatres with Harry Browning, publicity director of the circuit, in charge of the Milliken tour.

Dedham Man Dead In W. Roxbury Pit

Police today identified the body of a man found in a shallow pit in Washington street, West Roxbury, as that of Alfred Conlon, 52, of East street, Dedham.

Examination of the body indicated the man had been walking home early today and had stumbled on the brink of the pit, striking his head on the rocky bottom.

Special officers of the Roxbury station are investigating.

FACTS

Wahington, Oct. 16 (US)—National government expenses, in five years, have jumped $27.76 for every man, woman and child in the United States.

In 1922, after the war, the per capita expenses were $34.54.

In 1926, under President Coolidge, they were cut to $30.76.

In 1930 they were $32.42.

In 1935, they are $60.18.

In 1936, if President Roosevelt spends the entire $10,000,000,000 appropriated this year, the national government expenses will be $80 for every man, woman and child in this country.

STATE SENATE PRESIDENCY AT STAKE AGAIN

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Election of William H. McSweeney of Salem to the State Senate today revived interest in the presidency of that body on Beacon Hill.

When Senator James G. Moran of Mansfield, Republican, was chosen as president after a long deadlock last January, the Republicans were in the majority by two votes, the identical position in which McSweeney's victory now places them.

Senator Erland F. Fish of Brookline, former Senate president, was the outstanding candidate to succeed himself. But Moran, with the backing of the 19 Democrats, challenged Fish. Ballot after ballot gave Fish 20 votes and Moran 20. The knot was finally cut when Senator William A. Davenport, Republican, of Greenfield, shifted to Moran.

President Moran has been the object of bitter hostility by many of his Republican colleagues since the episode. Talk of another election for the presidency when the Legislature comes in in January, 1936, has been in the air for some time.

SUPREME COURT RULING

A decision of the Supreme Court justices, given in 1921 after the biennial elections, was dug up to bolster the movement.

In this decision the court ruled that the Constitution does not require that the officers of the Senate be elected for each annual session, that they may serve for the two sessions, but that the Senate can adopt a rule limiting the term of the presiding officer to one year.

In other words, the court advised that the Senate could make or unmake its president at any time—that he serves only during the body's pleasure.

Neither Moran nor the Democrats in the Senate worry at this time over anything the Republicans may do along this line. The 19 Democrats with Moran's vote, can block any such attempt. The Republicans, able to muster but 20 votes, even in the event that Senator Davenport changes his mind, lack the one vote necessary to elect Fish, or even to pass an order for such an election.

REPUBLICAN CHANCES

Republican chances of changing the present order of things in the upper branch of the legislature depend entirely upon a loss among the Democrats, through death, resignation, or some other elimination.

It is no secret that Senator William Conroy, Democrat, of Fall River, who was appointed a member of the State Industrial Accident Board, decided to retain his membership in the Senate to preserve the status quo.

Acting Governor Joseph L. Hurley declined to comment on the election of McSweeney.

The pardon committee of the governor's council, of which the acting governor is chairman, in private session went over all pending applications for pardons from inmates of the state penal institutions.

It was stated that the committee's report will be submitted to Governor Curley when he returns from his trip to Honolulu.

Quiet at Swatow

Hongkong, China, Oct. 16 (AP)—The U. S. S. Asheville, a gunboat, reported today all was quiet at Swatow, China, to which it was dispatched after a Sino-Japanese dispute arose over customs duties.

Dillinger's Betrayer Waits Fate

By Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 16—Federal Judge John P. Barnes was asked to rule today on whether Mrs. Anna Sage is an American citizen by marriage, as she claims, or an alien of Rumanian birth, as the government contends, and therefore subject to deportation.

Mrs. Anna Sage who put the finger on John Dillinger in a federal agents' death trap last year, faces deportation penalty because she was twice convicted of operating disorderly houses in Indiana.

Her attorneys, Thomas J. Johnson, Sr., and Thomas J. Johnson, Jr., say when she married Michael Ciolal, her first husband, she became an American citizen under the old immigration law.

SALEM GIVEN 6 YEARS IN HOLDUP

Moses Salem, South End exboxer, interrupted his second trial for armed robbery and assault with a surprise plea of guilty in Suffolk Superior Court today.

He was immediately sentenced to 6 to 8 years in state prison. Sentence was no sooner passed than a government witness was arrested in the courtroom and sentenced to three months in jail for contempt of court, accused of giving false testimony in his failure to identify Salem.

He is Richard Abizard, taxi driver, who last week caused a mistrial at Salem's first trial when he charged that a woman had threatened him in the courthouse corridor.

The woman accused by Abizard was Mrs. Barbara LaRose of Washington street, South End. She was held on a contempt charge, but Judge Fosdick has made no disposition in her case. He said he was shaken in his belief of Abizard.

Abizard testified he did not know Salem and had been told by police to identify him as one of two men who held up two passengers in the Abizard cab.

Fox Arrested On U. S. Warrant

New York City, Oct. 15—William Fox, Motion picture magnate, was arrested today in Atlantic City, N. J., on a Federal warrant issued at the request of a patent pooling congressional committee, David G. Berger, counsel to that committee announced.

Fox will appear before the committee now in session here, late today.

According to Mr. Berger, Fox ignored a subpoena requesting his appearance causing the issuance of the warrant.

M'SWEENEY WIN IS HAILED BY REPUBLICANS

John W. Lyons and former School Committeeman John D. Lynch topped the ticket for mayor.

Mayor-Representative Richard M. Russell did not seek another term. He threw his support to City Treasurer William J. Shea, but was unable to deliver the mayor's chair to him.

Shea said today that he would ask for a recount.

11,951 FOR LYNCH

Lynch, a banker and druggist, received a total of 11,951 votes, while Lyons, who has run the city for the past 10 months, polled 8462.

The candidate receiving the highest number of votes in the primary has never been defeated in Cambridge in the election, but friends of Lyons expect to shatter the tradition.

Republican political leaders hailed with delight the successful campaign of William H. McSweeney of Salem to the State Senate.

McSweeney, by defeating John C. Birmingham by nearly 5000 votes, takes the seat vacated by the death of Senator Albert Pierce.

The election gives the Republicans 21 votes in the upper branch of the State Legislature, to 19 for the Democrats.

Leaders of the winning party claimed the election a triumph over Governor Curley, who gave his support to Birmingham.

Mayor James E. Hagan of Somerville was re-nominated for another term with 9976 votes cast in his favor.

He led his nearest competitor, former Alderman Leslie E. Knox, by 1145 votes. Two years ago, Mayor Hagan defeated Knox for the office.

IRWIN LEADS

In Medford, Mayor John J. Irwin led the list of candidates by a safe margin, with one precinct of the seven wards uncounted.

Mayor Irwin polled 6945 votes with the one precinct missing, as against 4107 received by Deputy United States Marshal and former Mayor John H. Burke.

In Everett, Alderman Frank E. Lewis led Mayor James A. Roche by a vote of 5329 to 3532 with Walter R. Morris third in the field of seven candidates with a total of 2956. Lewis and Roche were nominated and will run-off at the November 5 election.

Entering his first campaign for mayor, Lewis surprised even his most ardent backers with his showing over the veteran campaigner, Mayor Roche. He was alderman from Ward 3 for two years, and also served on the common council.

With but five of the 18 wards counted in Waltham, Mayor Frederick L. MacDonald held a big lead over his nearest competitor, Representative Thomas J. Fianagry, who was battling with former City Solicitor John J. Foster for second place.

MANNING 7000 AHEAD

In Lynn, Mayor J. Fred Manning, who did not make a campaign speech, swamped former Mayor Harland A. McPhetres, running about 7000 votes ahead.

In third place in Lynn was Elmer W. Fall, with 3628. William A. Sexton and Harold R. Field received less than 1000 votes between them.

A field of five candidates in Pittsfield was led by Mayor Allen H. Bagg, who was nominated for re-electing by more than 800 votes over Alfred Daniels.

Bagg and Daniels will oppose each other in the November election.

SHERMAN'S PLEA

Killer Would Give Babies a Chance

Worcester, Oct. 16—Newell P. Sherman, "American Tragedy" slayer of his wife, did a little belated thinking about his two small children today.

He asked his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sherman, to take them away from the locale of his crime and give them a chance to grow up in some distant place where they will never be told their father was convicted of killing their mother for love of another woman.

The request was made in the county jail where Sherman awaits sentence of death.

Shermans have lived in Sutton for five generations. They helped establish the town and the Congregational church where this one sang hymns while plotting murder.

The children, Janice May, who will be two on Friday, and Dudley P., not a year old, are living with the grandparents.

Sherman, his guards reported, appears to be resigned to his fate, although the case is expected to go to the supreme court.

SCHULTZ AID Shot in Neck

New York, Oct. 16 (INS)—An alleged member of the Dutch Schultz gang war in a critical condition today in Harlem Hospital, the victim of another outburst of underworld warfare.

He is Irving Blaumer, 27. He was shot through the neck and thrown from an automobile in Central Park.

CAHILL NAMED MAINE KILLER

Somerville detectives hurried to Maine today following the apparent linking of the missing Harry P. Cahill with the fiendish slaying of 12-year-old Annie Knights of Fairfield.

A picture of Cahill, sought since September, 1933, in connection with the murder of 10-year-old Peggy McCarthy allegedly was identified as that of the man last seen with the slain Maine girl.

Nine-year-old Carroll Buker, who saw the girl and a man scarcely an hour before her death a week ago Monday, made the identification.

Another local angle in the case was the identification of the rope used to bind the slain girl, whose body was found a week ago, as being manufactured by a Boston concern.

CITY HAS 15,521 NEW VOTERS

Little interest is shown in registration of voters for the November 5 election. Officials of the municipal election commission estimate not more than 6000 names will be added before the deadline at 10 o'clock tonight.

A total of 15,521 names has been registered since June 1. Of that number 1000 appeared yesterday. Except for drives by supporters of John C. Flaherty of Dorchester, Herman Carp of Brighton and Hayward Tamkin of Mattapan, candidates for school committee, little effort has been made to obtain new voters.

Twenty-two places are to be filled in the City Council and three in the school committee.

HURLEY FIGHTS CCC CLOSINGS

Acting Governor Joseph L. Hurley moved today to save ten Civilian Conservation Corps camps scheduled to pass out of existence between November 1 and 15.

Hurley wired Robert Fechner, federal director, urging the order be rescinded. He pointed out the state has spent a large sum of money to buy land in co-operation with the government's plan to utilize unemployed men.

Hurley said the money spent by the state would virtually be wasted if the camps were discontinued.

"If the program of the CCC must be curtailed it should be reduced in states other than Massachusetts," he added.

Federal officials have said the curtailment was ordered in the interest of economy.

ROADS OR NOT, ITALIAN 'CAISSONS GO ROLLING ALONG'

Old Artillery Song -:- Echoes in Africa -:- To Beat of Big Guns

To their sorrow, Haile Selassie's tribesmen are learning gun-thud words and high explosive shellfire music of the old artillery marching song, "The Caissons Go Rolling Along!" For, roads or no roads, Italian caissons are rolling mile by mile into Ethiopian hills and the lean snouts of field howitzers like this are belching long range destruction into mud-walled towns. These cannoneers are moving their piece into position to bombard Aduwa. The picture, taken during actual batle, is copright by Pathe Newsreel and has been brought to you by native runner, airplane, fast steamship and airplane again. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

"So just send in your chiefs and surrender! It's worse if you fights or you runs! You can hide in the caves—they'll be only your graves—but you can't get away from the guns!" Kipling wrote it long ago. But it still holds true as Italian artillery, guns like this travel-stained piece in the hills above Aduwa, reach out with high explosive shellfire to batter down, one by one, every shelter and stronghold found by Haile Selassie's brave but helpless savage warriors. The picture, taken during the actual siege of Ethiopia's "Verdun," has been brought more than 8000 miles to you by native runner, airplane, fast steamship and airplane again. It is copyright, 1935, by Pathe Newsreel and the Boston Evening American. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

London, Oct. 16—The Exchange Telegraph correspondent with the Italian army in northern Ethiopia reported tonight that American machine guns were found among large quantities of arms found hidden under the royal palace in Aduwa.

British and Belgian rifles also were found in the Ethiopian arms cache, the correspondent said.

NOTIZIE ODIERNE DELLA GUERRA

This is an Italian translation of the Italian-Ethiopian war news which appears elsewhere in this paper today.

By FORMER LIEUTENANT GIOVANNI NANIA

L'AVANZATA CONTINUA

Notizie ricevute da Addis Abeba informano che l'armata italiana del Nord continua la sua avanzata puntando risolutamente su Macalle', riuscendo di gia' a coprire un percorso di oltre 20 miglia ad ovest di Akuum.

Il governo etiopico ha rapportato nello stesso tempo che altri 100,000 abissini sono stati inviati a rinforzare le truppe di Ras Seyum, il cui fronte si estende lungo le catene di barriere naturali formate da un labirinto di burroni, valli ed alte montagne a nord dell'impero africano, sulla linea compresa fra Alaji e Sakota.

Dispaceri italiani dalla stessa sona, inoltre che le truppe fasciste procedono nella loro marcia vittoriosa senza incontrare eccessiva resistenza, ritardando solo a causa delle accidentalita' del terrendo.

Il Maresciallo d'Italia Pietro Badoglio, Capo di Stato Maggiore dell'Esercito, il quale s' giunto ieri ad Asmara, e' atteso in giornata sul fronte avanzato da dove dirigera' personalmente le future azioni militari.

L'ALA ITALIANA

L' 'ala italiana e' molto attiva su tutti i fronti. Dispacci diretti a Roma da corrispondenti ai seguito delle truppe operanti, dicono che gli aeroplani italiani continuano i loro voli di ricognizione su tutti i settori di concentramento militare etiopico, recando spesso danni ingenti abandando gli agglomeramenti che s' loro possibile scorgere.

Un deposito di munizioni a Sud di Macalle' e' stato colto in pieno e fatto esplodere da apparecchi da bombadamento guidati dal Conte Galeazzo Ciano, genero del Duce.

Rapporti da Harrar indicano nello stesso tempo che l'antica ed importante citta', considerata il "giardino d'Etiopia" ed centro strategico a ridosso delle linee del Sud, e' stata abbandonata completamente dalla sua popolazione dopo che squadriglie di aeroplani italiani ve hanno compiuto voli di ricognizione.

I residenti, compresi molti americani, giornalisti stranieri e fotografi, hanno trovato scampo sulle alture circostanti e rifugiandosi addirittura a Diredaua, trenta miglia distante da Harrar.

PROPOSTE DI PACE

Mentre a Ginevra continuano le discussioni sui come meglio colpire l'Italia nei suoi vitali interessi, il Presidente del Consiglio Francese, Pietro Laval agendo da mediatore, ha presentato stamane una nuova proposta di pace che dovrebbe, secondo l'intendimento, porre fine al conflitto italo-etiopico.

Tale proposta, formulata personalmente dal Presidente Laval e che al vuole sia la piu' seria di tutte le proposte presentate da che sono cominciate le ostilita', contiene sei punti di vitalissima importanza, cosi' distinti:

2—La provincia Abissina del Tigre' dove le truppe Italiane hanno adesso il controllo, da essere resa autonoma sotto il protettorato Italiano.

3—L'Etiopia deve cedere all-Italia la provincia di Ogaden, Harrar, Aussa, Teru e Piru, cosi' da congiungere l'Eritrea alla Somalia Italiana.

4—L'Inghilterra, in cambio del continuato dominio nel nordovest Etiopia, intorno al Lago Tsana, cede all'Etiopia il porto di Zeila che si congiunge a Gibuti, su, folfo di Aden e quindi alla ferrovia Gibuti-Addis Abeba la quale attraverserebbe il territorio ceduto all'Italia. In aggiunta, l'Etiopia deve cedere all'Italia una striscia della zona ferroviaria ad ovest di Addis Abeba tra l'Eritrea e la Somalia Italiana.

5—Il rimanente del l'Etiopia, con Haile' Selassie' al trono, da essere posta sotto un sistema autonomo ma sotto il controllo di "un'assistenza internazionale" diretto in massima dall'Italia, con l'ausilio della Lega nel bandire la schiavitu' e civilizzare il paese.

6—La Lega delle Nazioni deve essere arbitra pel regolare le controversie e deve riceverne credito.

Le autorita' italiane si sono rifiutate di commentare la proposta.

470,000 Native Warriors Plan Attack on Aduwa

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Addis Ababa, Oct. 16—Italy's "annexation" of Aduwa was received here with cold indignation today and the remark that "taking it is one thing, and keeping it is another!"

Behind this attitude is the redoubtable Ras Kassa, commander-in-chief of the northern Ethiopian armies, who is now at or near Aduwa with 270,000 men and another 200,000 en route.

Ras Kassa, now 60, was a warrior of 21 on the battlefield of Aduwa in 1896, when the Ethiopians slaughtered the Italians. Today he is a little bald fat man with a rabbinical beard, sworn never to rest until the Italians are driven out.

What Ras Kassa wants to do is to surround Aduwa and cut off the Italians, who have only one pathway into Aduwa from the north, and that is through a deep ravine.

NATIVE WARFARE

Ras Kassa knows his men cannot go up against the Italian machineguns, but the traditional method of Ethiopians against overwhelming mechanical force is to wait until nightfall, strip naked, and creep up on the enemy and slaughter him with swords and spears.

Whether this is feasible after the Italians thoroughly fortify Aduwa with plenty of barbed wire is doubtful in the view of neutral military experts, but that an Ethiopian attack will be made is considered probable.

Treachery of the blackest variety was officially admitted today when a government spokesman sorrowfully declared that Ras Haile Selassie Gugsa, lord of a part of Tigre Province, had sold out to the Italians.

Ras Gugsa's treachery had already been announced by the Italians, but nobody here would believe it.

It took the government a week to learn the details, because Ras Gugsa stole about 100 miles of the only telephone line connecting his section of the front with Addis Ababa, and that is the reason that Addis Ababa has had no news from the north all this time.

Contrary to Italian official communiques boasting that Ras Gugsa took thousands of men, including important chieftains, with him, the Ethiopian government informed International News Service that Ras Gugsa had only 100 followers, the majority of them members of his household.

DEATH PENALTY DECREED

Emperor Haile Selassie is bitter at Ras Gugsa's betrayal, and International News Service was officially told that the death penalty for contumacy has already been passed against Ethiopia's "Benedict Arnold."

The Emperor hotly resents Italy's claim to set up Gugsa as a pretender to the throne, merely because he is a great-great-grandson of Emperor John.

Prices Soar As Italians Hold Aduwa

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Aduwa, Ethiopia, Oct. 14 (Delayed) — Italian civil administrators of Aduwa report that virtually all the native population has returned here. Near Aduwa 2000 men were working on a new road.

Aduwa is booming under Italian domination. Prices are soaring to a point where the Aduwans are quickly becoming millionaires in their own estimation.

They now charge ten lire (about 50 cents) for a bottle of beer—four times the cost of beer in Rome. But Aduwan shopkeepers sell champagne for the same prices as wine, 40 lire (about $3.20) a flask—eight times the cost in Rome.

Hearing Granted Brockton Lifer

A hearing for Pasquale Gatrambone of Brockton, sentenced to life in 1920 for murder in the second degree, will be conducted at State Prison October 29 by the advisory board on pardons.

The hearing is required under a new law. It provides that all lifers who have served 15 years be given a hearing.

ALL MUST BAN ITALY IMPORTS, LEAGUE RULES

By International News Service

Geneva, Oct. 16—The sLague of Nations co-ordinating committee of 52 nations this evening adopted a resolution providing that every League member is obligated to apply penalties against Italy as quickly as possible.

The vote was technically unanimous, only Argentina not definitely assenting. Her silence was taken officially as acceptance.

The resolution, drawn up by international jurists and adopted by the sanctions "general staff" shortly before it was approved by the larger committee, provided that the League covenant is the paramount international law for member

The ruling was a direct blow at Austria, Hungary, Albania, Argentina and several other small nations which have declined to lend their full support to sanctions.

PROTESTS IGNORED

Austria had rated her friendship with Italy above the covenant obligations, Hungary had declared her economic status prevented sanctions against Italy, Albania had cited an Italo-Albanian treaty of friendship and Argentina had declared her Parliament would have to ratify any sanctions action before it could be taken at Geneva.

All these protests are thrown aside by today's ruling.

Adoption of the resolution, the greatest step yet taken by the sanctions committee to insure unified action, followed an impassioned appeal by Capt. Anthony Eden, British representative, for all League members to ban completely all imports from Italy.

ADOPT EMBARGO LIST

Late in the day the committee of 18 adopted an arms embargo list which was relayed to the co-ordinating committee of 52 along with the covenant resolution.

As the various committees worked on details to make the penalties against Italy effective, diplomats prepared to sound out the United States on the question of co-operation.

(Editor's Note: As revealed by International News Service yesterday, the League's sanctions' experts have said there are many types of goods which it would be useless to stop going to Italy unless the United States agreed also to halt their export to Italy. The question of American buying of Italian goods also is under consideration.)

In accordance with British demands for all posible speed, the coordinating committee adopted the arms list only eight minutes after approving the jurists' ruling.

The list approved was the Roosevelt arms embargo list with additions by the committee's military experts which included powder, explosives and certain chemical products used in warfare. Hungary obtained on this ballot.

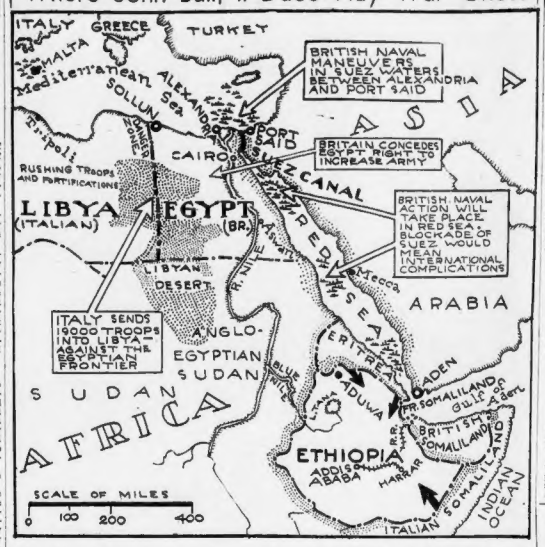
British-Italian Skirmish Denied

Rome, Oct. 16—Rumors today reached Rome, and were promptly denied officially, that there had been a clash between British and Italian troops on the British Somaliland frontier.

The rumors had 10 British and five Italians killed.

"We know where our armies are," said a government spokesman, "and the British certainly have not crossed the Somaliland frontier into Ethiopia."

Where John Bull, Il Duce Play War Chess



Map-diagram shows the great chess board on which British and Italian fleets and armies are playing a game which admittedly threatens the peace of the world. Recent dispatches say that England's sea power, now concentrated in the Mediterranean, will make its real bid for supremacy in the Red Sea, lest blocking of the Suez Canal involve neutral powers. Meantime a danger zone on land is developing in the border territory between Italian Libya and British Egypt, with the port of Sollun ticklishly situated near the junction of the two coastlines.

RAW DEAL MAD, MILLS WARNS

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 16—Ogden L. Mills, former Republican secretary of the treasury, said today that the "new order" in government can only destroy security, not assure it.

He told the New York Herald-Tribune's fifth annual forum on current problems that the federal administration is attacking the basic principles of the constitution underlying the "scheme of life" by which America has risen since it won its independence. He added:

"Incredible to relate, the government has dared impose criminal penalties on a farmer who grows for sale on his own farm more than the government says he may. This is bureaucracy gone mad.

"No less a person than Governor Franklin Roosevelt in 1930 held home rule is a fundamental necessity if we are to remain a truly united country."

The rules for the tournament, which has been long and impatiently awaited by model fliers of Greater Boston, differ from those of last year. A different model will be used in each of the six events. Individual members may compete as well as those affiliated with squadrons.

Gliders will be flown in Saturday's contest and these must be no fewer than 30 and no more than 100 square inches in wing area. The same type of glider will be used in the official 1935 Indoor Model Plane Air Races on Saturday, November 30.

Prizes in each of the monthly meets will be $3 for first place, $2 for second and $1 for third. While the grand awards at the end of the tournament have not been definitely decided they will probably consist of trophies for winners of first, second and third places in total flight time accumulated in the six meets.

All of the youths who competed last year are expected to enter in addition to many new contestants. Four girls of the Louise Wheeler Sky Girls squadron of Belmont will be on hand. They are Commander Barbara Keith, Rhea Doucette, Marion Chase and Alice Heyd.

Powers Ask U. S. to Restrict Imports From Italy

By Associated Press

Paris, Oct. 16—Officials disclosed today that France and Great Britain are asking Washington if the United States is willing to restrict its imports from Italy in case such a sanction against Premier Mussolini's nation is applied by the League of Nations.

The same authorities also stated that a similar question is being asked of other powers, including Germany, Japan and Brazil, which are not members of the League.

It was stated that the exploration is being conducted through the ambassadors of those nations.

The attitudes of the non-member countries is sought because of the fact that Yugoslavia, Austria, Spain and certain other countries, including the Scandinavian, are regarded as opposed to the plan for a restriction on purchases from Italy.

PROTESTS FILED

Officially, it was stated that some countries within the league had pointed out that any restrictions they made on trade with Italy would be ineffective if the United States, Germany and other countries increased their imports or even continued their normal trade.

Friends of Premier Laval said he had suggested that Il Duce order the Italian troops to cease action in Ethiopia as a means of getting Great Britain to consent to conciliation negotiations.

Officials repeated denials that Laval had "said anything at all" to Great Britain about withdrawing its warships from the Mediterranean.

FRANCE IN LINE

Officials revealed on the other hand that Laval told Sir George Russell Clerk, British ambassador, France was "inclined to furnish all the aid needed under Article XVI" of the League Covenant, when Clerk asked how far France would go in "solidarity."

France and Great Britain were reported unofficially to be considering strengthening the Pact of Locarno, as the tenth anniversary of its signing found Europe anxious over the Italian situation.

A report that Britain was inclining toward a process of automatic aid for France under the Locarno Pact, without awaiting a League of Nations definition of the aggressor in case France was attacked by Germany, was published in the newspaper L'Oeuvre.

U. S. Studying Embargo On Goods to Italy

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 16—While agreeing that a League of Nations embargo on raw materials against Italy might be ineffective of the United States declined to participate, Secretary of Commerce Roper asserted today the study of the problem was not sufficiently advanced to justify a recommendation.

His statement came in reply to questions of newspapermen as to whether the national munitions control board, of which he is a member, would recommend to President Roosevelt that an embargo be imposed against shipment of raw materials to Italy.

"We are simply studying things, preparing for any action that may be necessary," he said.

"If the League of Nations places an embargo against raw materials for Italy, and the United States does not, that would destroy the effectiveness of the League embargo, would it not?" he asked.

"That would be inferable, at least," Roper replied.

"The important thing we are doing is trying to keep out of this war," he said with emphasis.

Harar Attack Scares Subsidies

By Associated Press

Harar, Ethiopia, Oct. 16—Inhabitants of this city whof led to the surrounding hills yesterday in a panic at the appearance of Italian planes returned to their homes today.

Americans in the city also resumed desultory lives at the hotel, as confidence was restored.

The government has imposed a rigid ban on photographs of military, governmental and commercial activities. American journalists and cameramen hope the government will grant a permit to allow them to go to the front, but prospects appeared small today.

No planes appeared over the city today. Reports from Diredawa were that it was quiet there too.

2-WAY ITALIAN PUSH DUE

By Associated Press

Diredawa, Ethiopia, via Djibouti Tuesday, Oct. 15 (delayed)—Ethiopians today expressed the belief that anintensive e Italian push on both fronts, accompanied by widespread bombing, will begin as soon as Luigi Vinci-Gigliucci, the Italian Minister, leaves the country with the consul from Magalo.

Observers report a large concentration of both European and native troops is being made behind the present Ogaden front for a dash across the 230-mile stretch of waterless desert.

The Ethiopian main army under Dedjazmatch (General) Nesaibu is in front of Jijiga ready to give battle when war reaches the lowlands. Ras Desta's flanking forces are expected to come into the action in an endeavor to drive a wedge into the invaders.

French army pilots flying along the French Somaliland frontier saw 2000 Ethiopian cavalry approaching Mount Mussa Ali, 60 miles southwest of Assab within the Ethiopian frontier.

Italian tanks and 45,000 infantry, of whom 25,000 are natives, are said to be massed on the eastern flank of the mountain awaiting a signal for the second desert march preceded by bombing planes.

The principle objectives of the march are believed to be Addie Abbas, Desaye, bridges and the railway.

More Italian Troops at Suez

By International News Service

Rome, Oct. 16 — Authoritative sources today revealed a quiet mobilization of more than 17,000 additional Italian troops in Tripoli to bolster Italy's defense west of the Suez Canal.

The mobilization of these forces is regarded as a counter-threat to British preparations in the Mediterranean.

It was also learned that Premier Mussolini, preparing to meet "military sanctions with military measures," also dispatched 48 heavy bombing planes with the new troops.

Rome, Oct. 16—A war correspondent of the newspaper Giornale D'Italia reported today that the Ethiopians defending Aduwa and Akaum had large stores of dumdum bullets for use against the Italians.

This correspondent said the advancing Italian forces found munitions dumps well supplied with cartridges bearing explosive noses and made in Birmingham.

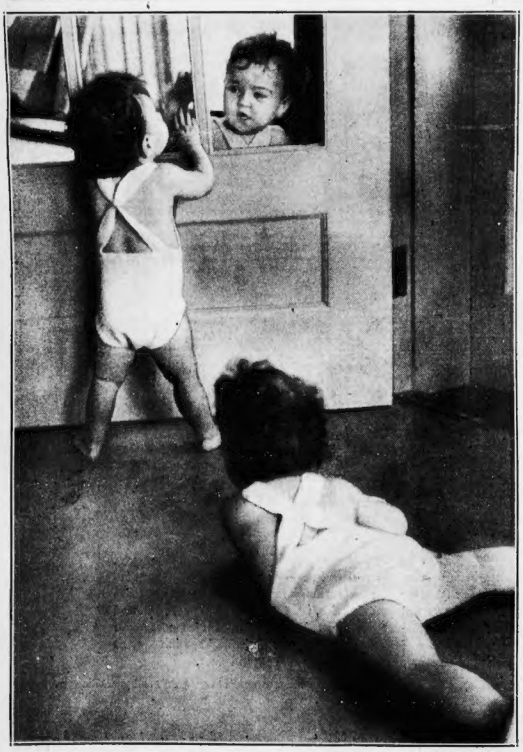
HAIR RIBBONS, NEW GAMES BRIGHTEN LIFE FOR 'QUINS'

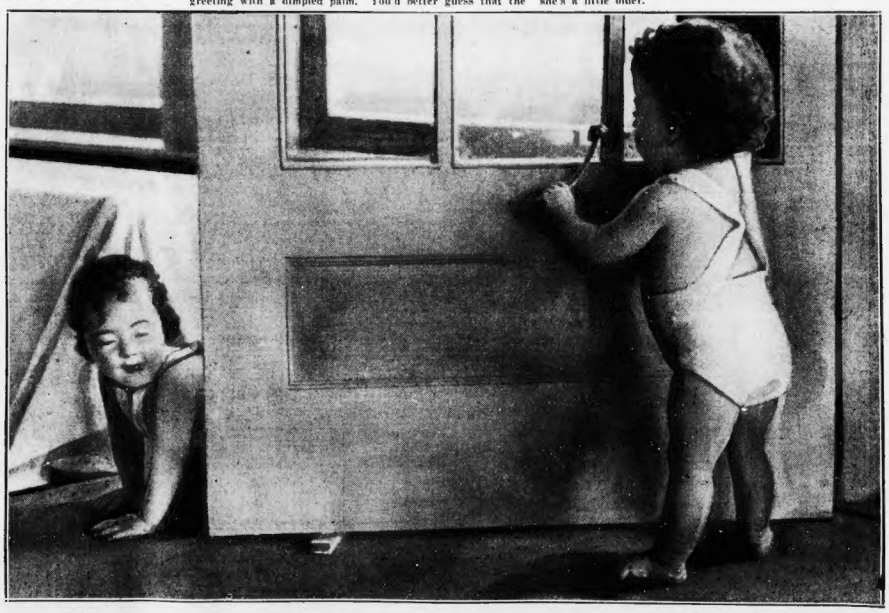
"LOOK ME OVER!"—One of the biggest thrills in any girl's life is her first hair-ribbon — and "quin" Cecile Dionne is posing with an expression which seems to say, "Well, here I am, folks, all prettied up. I hope you like my ribbon, but, if you don't, it's just too bad for you!"

OLD SOL IS AN OGLER—Among admirers of "quin" Marie Dionne's first hair-ribbon is Old Sol, himself. But shielding her eyes from his too ardent ogling, Marie poses, just the same, for her good friend, the cameraman, waving him a left-handed greeting with a dimpled palm. You'd better guess that the quintuplets are proud young women, nowadays, when they are all attired for company in their ever-increasing array of finery. This melting gaze which Marie is turning straight at her public is going to have masculine hearts going pitter-patter when she's a little older.



YVONNE ANNETTE EMELIE

PEEK-A-BOO—While Emelie, in the role of interested spectator, sprawls contentedly on the floor, "quins" Yvonne and Annette Dionne play "peek-a-boo" through the glass panel of their nursery door. Braced on her sturdy, dimpled little legs, Yvonne, back to the camera, shows you plainly how she and her sisters have developed physically. Emelie, too, is just bubbling over with energy. Annette, on the far side of the door, can hold her own in any nursery competition.



CECILE

"GRR-RR! I'M A GRIZZLY BEAR!" Out from her lair behind the door of the Dionne nursery, "quin" Cecile comes crawling on all fours, screwing up her little pink features into what's meant to be a ferocious scowl at her sister Annette. The latter is drumming at the door's glass pane, as much as to say, "Come on out, you big crose old bear; I'm right here ready and waiting for you!" The quintuplets, if anyone should care to ask them, could give the answer to the time-honored, nonsense riddle: "When is a door not a door?" In the case of their own, particular door, it's when it's a plaything, a refuge, a doll-house and a make shift mirror.

STUDENT RADICALS IN DRIVE TO CONTROL COLLEGE FUNDS

(This is the tenth in a series on the crisis in Federal relief.)

By JOHN H. NOONAN AND ALAN C. FRAZER

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

We have shown how radicals are seeking to organize the relief project workers in the large cities.

Their second objective is to control the students who are to be aided, eventually, by the $50,000,000 National Youth Administration fund.

In order to do this, they plan first, to have this youth assistance made permanent, and secondly, to have it extended to all needy college students.

Their chances of success have been increased by the action of the bureaucratic chiefs in the WPA who have placed emphasis on aid to college undergraduates and postgraduates, with secondary consideration to high school pupils and no aid at all for lower education.

Besides aiding students to receive higher education, while disregarding the lack of elementary school funds in many sections, the government officials have announced plans for establishment of Youth Centers for those who have passed beyond the college stage.

Moreover, the statement has been made in official circles that these Youth Centers may be made permanent.

New Social Schemes

This is tantamount to an admission that, in the eyes of many of the chief executives, relief is not a temporary expedient but an attempt to develop new social homes with federal funds.

Encouraged by such plans of the WPA organization, radicals are prepared to demand, at the next session of Congress, a law making student aid definitely permanent and extending its application to all citizens unable to continue through college without federal assistance.

A start will be made with the high school group, the subversive activities will be carried on more actively in the colleges, and the youth centers will not be ignored.

The collegiate organization, already in existence and sharpened for future activities by several years of practice, is the National Student League.

Radical Organization

This league, which must not be confused with the National Student Federation, is an admittedly radical organization.

If proof is required, excerpts from the league's Harvard-Radcliffe publication may be cited.

In reviewing the motion picture Three Songs About Lenin," this publication enthusiastically states:

"It is made clear by the shots of Japanese, German and English workers marching in honor of Lenin, that although this is a national epic—the story of the victorious Russian workers and their leader—it is also the first episode in THE FINAL AND INTERNATIONAL EPIC OF HUMANITY."

The same publication states:

"The step from the deportation of John Strachey (English radical) and the restriction of his books 'to the wholesale censorship of all writing and teaching by nationalistic supporters of the status quo will not be long."

In the same issue an attempt is made to organize the student waiters and a demand is made for an increase of their pay to 40 cents an hour and other benefits. An element is also made to stir up the goodies' as the Harvard dormitory maids are called to demand higher pay, on the allegation that a capitalistic society is exploiting them.

Serious Difficulties

Recognizing the National Student League for what it is, M. I. T. repudiated it and refused to recognize it as a collegiate organization.

Serious difficulties have been encountered by the PWA in putting the National Youth Administration plan into practice. As we have shown, no funds have come into Massachusetts, and in numerous places school principals have declared the NYA rules impracticable, so that changes have had to be made. Direct aid rather than aid in exchange for student work has been decided upon.

These difficulties correspond to the breakdown of the WPA at many points. It has been revealed that on the WPA projects coming under army control, 80 to 85 per cent of the workers will be non-relief workers, and hence, most of these projects cannot be started for several months.

The number to be employed on the Cape Cod canal has been reduced from 1200 to 500.

Winter weather will preclude work on many construction projects.

Massachusetts FRA-PWA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch who from day to day is giving official recognition to delays admits that he sees for WPA work.

He "hopes" that the office at Washington will extend the ERA another month, while the WPA staggers to a start in this state. But he has nothing to say about the amount which ERA workers may receive next month. October pay, for most of them, was reduced to $6 a week.

(More federal relief disclosures in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

WifeSwapper Plans Suit For Balm

By Associated Press

Las Vegas, Nev., Oct. 16—Walter W. Emerson, one of the principals in the quadrangular "wife-swapping" divorce case in Los Angeles last year, announced today he planned to file a $500,000 alienation of affections suit against his former best friend, Barton Sewell, wealthy Beverly Hills sportsman.

Mrs. Jane Emerson

Emerson made his announcement after he had been served in a divorce suit Mrs. Jane Emerson charges cruelty and asks custody of their three children.

Emerson was here to testify in the divorce action brought by Sewell against Mrs. Leah Sewell. The Sewell hearing was continued until Friday.

Emerson said his suit against Sewell probably would be filed in Los Angeles.

Both Emersons were denied a divorce in Los Angeles by Judge Ben B. Lindsey. Sewell then admitted asserted intimacies with Mrs. Emerson, but insisted Emerson had consented.

Recently Mrs. Sewell was named co-respondent in a divorce action filed by Mrs. Mae Elizabeth Keaton against Buster Keaton, film comedian.

Mrs. Keaton still has pending a suit for $200,000 alienation of affections suit.

MEXICO BOLSHEVISTIC

Greatest Danger, Says Student

Bolshevism is the great problem in Mexico today, according to John MacDonough, student at the Boston University school of law, who has just returned from a 2000-mile tour of that country.

The law school student observed that Bolshevism is being foisted upon the Mexicans in the guise of Socialism.

Because he believed the wild stories he had heard about conditions in Mexico, MacDonald bought a revolver. But he saw nary a bandit.

The youthful traveller said:

"The problem of religious freedom, contrary to prevalent American opinion, is subordinated to that of the educational problem. Today all churches are considered the property of the Mexican government."

And as to the attitude of the Mexicans towards Americans, they look upon Americans as a source of income."

'Prisoner of the OGPU' By GEORGE KITCHIN

CHAPTER 23

The hard snow crackled and squeaked under the runners. The bright sun, reflected in the snowy surface, blinded our eyes. It was four below zero, and the frost bit our faces and stuck in our eyelashes.

After sitting in the office all these days, it was a great pleasure to be out in the open and to breathe the clear, cold, invigorating air. There was not a cloud in the sky.

Zakhariantz was driving the first sleigh himself and was going very fast. Our driver had a hard time keeping up with him. We made a stop at the half-way village Yakovleyskaya.

Zakhariantz stopped his horses in front of a pretty, well-built cottage, jumped out of the sleigh and beckoned us to stop there for a bite.

Inside the cottage its bearded owner welcomed us. The cottage consisted of one large room, which was divided by hangings. Pretty soon the peasant's wife appeared from behind the hangings and brought a boiling samovar, a little black bread, and some cakes with potato stuffing.

"Please excuse us, but we have no tea," said our hostess. "We cannot get it in the co-operative store."

Zakhariantz opened his bag and produced some tea, sugar, two tins of preserves and a piece of butter. The peasant got a bottle of vodka out of his little chest. The Russian village has changed little in this respect.

In each cottage you could be sure of finding a bottle of the national invigorator hidden away for "emergencies."

Ikons were hanging in the main corner of the room, as of old, but under them were hung pictures of the Red leaders, Marx, Lenin, Stalin and Voroshilov.

Next to them were prints of the Russo-Japanese War showing little yellow Japs running away from the Cossacks. Then came an old photograph of our host in a soldier's uniform and some more faded color prints of the World War.

Brighter prints portrayed the more recent events of the revolution and civil war. In a central position hung the familiar reproduction of the painting showing Emperor Alexander II, liberator of the serfs surrounded by his grateful people.

In another half-hour we were again under way.

All around us were dark fir trees covered with dazzling white snow. The pines lifted their graceful heads high above the fire. In the snow were some impressions made by skis, and rabbit tracks.

One of the old residences housed the executive offices of the Ebna timber-works. We were met by the assistant to the manager, prisoner Zweigintsev, a tall, good-looking man with well-bred manners and a pleasant voice.

In the office I found several of my old Moscow prison companions who were employed there and had a tolerable existence.

"We are all right," they said, "life is quite bearable. But wait till you see the conditions in the forest!"

The man in charge of supplies immediately jumped on me.

"It is a shame the way you treat us! I am torn to pieces by all our outposts needing supplies and all you do is write us pretty letters and promise to do something tomorrow!"

I advised him to make his complaints to Bukhaltzev, as my being on the commission was purely accidental and I could not help him in any way.

"Complain to Bukhaltzev!" he exclaimed with a despairing gesture. "But it is absolutely useless. Our men are actually starving and Bukhaltzev stays in Kotlas and gets drunk every day."

In another hour we were again on our way. It was getting dark. After sunset it had grown colder and we felt the frost sharply on our faces.

That night we had to make another 50 kilometers over a forest road. The doctor and I were not armed. An armed guard accompanied Zakhariantz in his sleigh.

Our coachman was a little scared.

"There are wolves around here," he said. "I hope they leave us alone."

Quite recently I was marking time and jumping about in the snow to the humiliating orders of Grigoriantz at the Kotlas Transfer Station.

Now, a few weeks later, I was a member of an inspection committee of the penal servitude system.

About two o'clock we reached a little village, aroused the owners of a cottage, and had tea there.

Again sitting in the sleigh, the doctor related to me the hushed-up affair of Labadin, former commander of the Novikov timber-base.

This Labadin was convicted on the complaint of a 13-year-old girl and was sent to the penal camps. As he had had some experience in forestry, he soon made a way for himself and was appointed commander of a base, where he was in charge of a thousand men and 40 women prisoners.

All the women who were half-way good-looking passed through his hands before getting their jobs assigned to them. It was a sort of a quarantine station. But there was one girl, a young country school teacher from the Ukraine who resisted him.

Neither promises nor threats had any effect. She continued rebuffing all his advances in spite of the fact that all the hardest and dirtiest work was heaped upon her.

Once when he was under the influence of liquor, Lasdin, exasperated by his failure, ordered her to make up his rooms.

There he seized her and, with the assistance of two convict murderers, who were devoted to him, subjected her to the torture with a red hot poker and a mouse. She died in agony.

In spite of Labadin's efforts to conceal his crime, it was all brought to light and both he and his two helpers were arrested and sent to Solvechegodsk.

Another chapter of George Kitchin's "Prisoner of the Ogpu" will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

FRANCHOT TONE STARS ON AIR TONIGHT

By N. E. T.

Mid-wee' and the "mask" personality most like to answer an armchair sigh of good radio show seekers would seem to be the fastidious Mr. Franchot Tone, film star and bridegroom of more than a week.

He won the heart and ear of Joan Crawford in marriage vows last Friday.

'Kind Lady' Pleases In Copley Premiere

MARY YOUNG HEADS CAST

By GEORGE HOLLAND

'Kind Lady' is a tight and well-knit melodrama about a horrendous experience of a London gentle-woman who permits the best-written villain of the New York 1935 theatrical season to enter her house and take prolonged possession of it

With Mary Young in the starring role, 'Kind Lady' opened as appropriate matinee last night at the Copley Theater, marking the second personal success of Miss Young and an adequate supporting cast since the summer town theater came to life again two weeks ago.

Like 'Dear Brutus' which had its best in the new dramatic experiences of an elderly George Holland woman is seen by comparatively 'Kind Lady' gives Miss Young an ideal outlet for her talent, but for us 'Dear Brutus' the role of the elderly woman's experiences are centering.

In a brief prologue Mary Herries and her husband are seen as a quaint, if not wooden, A visitor, Mr. Potter-Kent, Mary Herries sees in the visitor a likeness for the wife of her existence. Potter-Kent is a man who admitted a good deal of it into her London home. There a black-eyed and [illegible] Mary Herries and Lucy Abbott is told.

In a part, splendidly done, of Mary Herries and Miss Abbott sums up simply Christmas Eve, a dank London night. Into with money, a pet-loving young man seeking charity. The dark lady brings him to her house for tea. He departs with a cigarette case of value, and returns a week later with the cigarette case and a few of his own paintings for sale. He had pawned the trinket to buy food for his wife and baby, so their story.

From that point Henry Abbett finds it possible to move in a pseudo-while, a beloved baby, and a set of fellow-crooks who proceed to take over Miss Herries' mansion and many of her possessions through the device of keeping her captive in a barred-up room of her own home. It comes across quite plausibly and with real melodramatic effect.

Robert Ober plays Henry Abbott and plays the part well. Edmond Ryan gave a perfect account of himself as Peter Sanford the young American bondsman who marries Miss Herries' niece, Phyllis. Marjorie Clark plays Phyllis, and is very good.

Lilian Mason as Mr. Edwards, butler-crook to the cooped-up Miss Herries, was excellent, and Rose Hubner, as Mrs. Edwards, deserved a prime piece of acting in an important minor part.

I was somewhat amused, although it perhaps has little to do with the case, by the programming of the author as 'Chodorov.' This seemed a trifle presumptuous to me, because Mr. Chodorov, whose first name is Edward, is not yet the playwright that he bids for instance, was the composer.

Edward Chodorov it was when 'Kind Lady' played New York, and Edward Chodorov it was when he collaborated on 'Wonder Boy' for Jed Harris. It seems that Mr. Chodorov should permit posterity to pass upon his worthlessness.

For the kids and adults a flight of entertainment. Mae West at the 'Kind Lady' is endorsed up to re-write.

'There's Wisdom in Women' Has Tailor-Made Cast

Just before a play goes into rehearsal, a theatrical producer's office is like anybody's kitchen when the man of the house is cooking his favorite dish.

There are too many ingredients, and too many cooks in the cast salad.

The D. A. Doran office where "There's Wisdom in Women," Joseph O. Kesselring's new comedy started its peaceful career in the lull before the storm, presented an amazing aspect of calm at first.

No actresses rushed in and out. Harry Gribble, director, didn't demand new scenes and interminable readings. And the crowd never got beyond the outer office.

There's a reason, however. In fact a couple of them. "There's Wisdom in Women" had proved its mettle last summer at Locust Valley, and each member of the cast walked on in a tailor-made part. There were no calls to casting agents, no friends of the management, no budding young protegés.

Ruth Weston, the leading woman, went from the Locust Valley tryout, via Westport to Hollywood to appear in a picture called "Splendor." Walter Pidgeon contracted to play for at least three weeks in "The Night of January 16th."

'Switzerland' By De Cou

"Glorious Switzerland" second in the series of the Pinch-On Co-Ordinate Pictures will be merged at Tremont Temple Friday evening and Saturday afternoon.

The Swiss picture, entirely in color, is said to be among the most interesting and striking news in war traveler and color films. Among the beauty spots are Lake Geneva and the Bernese Oberland, the St. Bernard Pass, Lugano and Zurich.

Dolores Costello's First Role in Comeback

By JERRY HOFFMAN
(Pinch-Hitting for Louella O. Parsons)
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, Oct. 16—When Dolores Costello returns to the screen, ending a retirement of four years, she will do so in the role of Dearest in "Little Lord Fauntleroy." This, according to David O. Selznick, will be the first in a series of big roles being planned for the re-establishment of Dolores as a star.

"Dearest" will be the former Mrs. John Barrymore's first appearance since she reappeared after a two years' absence in 1931 to make 'Expensive Women' for First National. Her last picture prior to that was 'Second Wife' in 1929 when she quit pictures because of the expected arrival of Elbe, Mr. Barrymore.

Alice White

High Wall, Alice White, Dolores Costello, David Selznick for 'David Copperfield,' and Richard Schayer will adapt the famous book by Frances Hodgson Burnett.

Certainly a girl can change her mind, and why should Kay Francis be different? Kay was determined to quit the legitimate theater with her movie career and had arranged to return to New York for 'Dodsworth' on the stage. Well, she won't. It may be a man and then again it may be simply that she likes the script of 'Prison Farm' at Warner Brothers. In any event, Nevertheless, Kay is planning and she'll have Donald Woods up-to-date for in this original story by Harold Buckley and Abem Finkel. Incidentals, Addison Richards. He's on a new long term contract with this picture.

It was E. H. Derr and Charles E. Sullivan, as president and general manager of Pathe, who brought Ann Harding and Constance Bennett to Hollywood. These same gentlemen are credited with developing George Raft and Paul Muni, as 'heat face' for Howard Hughes. Now they have form of their own producing company, Professor Pathos. Lee Wilson, moved to front as of growing new stars. They will make six pictures yearly.

Snapshots of Hollywood

A 'Big Boy' turned loose on the set one of FRANK FAY'S Monday night cases of the Texas Guinan-Gloria Swanson and HERBERT MARSHALL laughing at Frank's public comedy. BILLY WILKERSON introducing to Jolly BILLIE SEWARD, at a big party there which included Harry Richmond with the original Vanity Fair dancer Faith Bacon.

ALICE WHITE with two new boys, MESSRS. SIMMONS and BERGEN-FOX at CLEO BROWN'S opening at the Derby Club. LUCIEN HUBBARD sending his string of polo ponies to his B-Bar-B guest ranch in the desert on the Hollywood polo grounds. Keen practicing. And as MISS DIONNE said to JEAN DARCE—That's all today . . . See you tomorrow!

GLITTERING GIRL

CHAPTER XIV

"You'll drop in tomorrow morning at the address I gave you, Terry, she murmured, sotto voice.

"Fraid I can't. My boss, Brandeis, is only in town till Tuesday. I'll be tied up with him," replied Terry in a carrying tone.

Vernon wondered: "Will he 'phone me? But of course he will!"

She thrilled to the warm pressure of his hand as he helped her out of the car, but Nan was out in the sidewalk and alongside them, too, so he hadn't a chance to say much.

"You wait here," chirped Nan "I'll go in with her. I'll be right back in a jiffy."

So long, old thing Glad you had such a uplifting time. I'll be seeing you tomorrow morning," as she took farewell of Vernon in the foyer.

"I promised to go to church with Mother."

"Good little girl! I'll be at the hotel just after twelve. I shan't be awake till then, anyway. I'm taking you to our Sunday Morning Pajama Breakfast Club. It's a great sport. We meet weekly."

"But—"

"Nonsense! I'll rig you out with pajamas. We're longstanding this time in a respectable studio. I tried to get Terry to come, but it seems he's dated heavily."

Nan went away. Vernon went up to the tower suite in the elevator Everything was quiet Her parents were asleep. She was glad of that. There was much to think over.

During Sunday morning service on Fifth avenue Vernon's mind wandered incessantly. But her thoughts soared with the heavenly music. The choir boys' voices sounded like angels to her.

Love! It had come to her at last. Do as she would, she couldn't for a moment forget Terry Shannon's kisses . . .

Thrillingly queer how life had changed for her! Plain little Margie Tyson from the Texas ranch had shed her chrysalis and emerged as a glittering butterfly!

Brilliant autumn sunlight flooded the steps of the cathedral where the service was over. A tang was in the air. Mrs Tyson her plump and work-worn hands in a mink muff, to match her cape, wobbled along on her spiked heels beside her child, for all the world like a small pouter pigeon.

"Tell me about the party last night," she commenced immediately, the beautiful words of the service fading from her mind as she eyed her daughter sharply.

The latter colored. Terry? How to tell her mother of his advent at the party?

"I met heaps of people. One of them—a Mrs. de Bray—wanted very much to come and call on you Mother."

"Humph! Glad there's someone remembers a girl has a mother. I must say Nan hasn't much sense of what's fitting." She gave the violet toque an inward rush. It was rather top-heavy, and apt to slip forward from its moorings. "Tell me about the man. Who all did you dance with?" ungrammatically.

Dance With Prince

"Prince Ivan Karinoff was one," replied Vernon. A little should placate any feelings of injury on her part at having been left behind. She added: "He's quite nice and fairly young. Heir of the old Russian nobility."

"And without a penny to his name, of course? He's here in New York heiress-hunting, I'll wager!"

"Oh, he didn't seem like that. He has beautiful manners."

"His stock in trade'. Who introduced him to you?"

"Mrs de Bray. She's quite nice too. She's really very anxious to call on you, Mother."

"Humph! Something up her sleeve? They'll be after us like cats after the cream—or wasps after the honey."

Nonsense, darling. What ails you?"

"I'm a little bilious after the long train trip, I guess. And the unpacking and getting settled in was tiring."

Vernon's heart smote her. She had been inconsiderate, leaving her mother so long alone yesterday. She couldn't help wondering—and was angry with herself for the disloyal thought—how her mother would fit in with the people on Park avenue.

Would they understand that beneath her brusque speech and sometimes queer manners lay real kindness of heart?

They found Nan Rushington reclining full length upon the sofa in the drawing room on their return, a cigarette dangling from her fingers, entertaining "Uncle Jake."

"Your devotions safely over? Hope you put up a prayer of forgiveness for your grand flirtation last night with Prince Karinoff, Vernon! Say, Aunt Sadie, what about you giving me a stiff commission when your beautiful she-did becomes a Princess?" Nan giggled, winking.

Mrs. Tyson teh-teh-ed this but was not at all annoyed. Tremendously ambitious was she for Vernon.

Silly in Pajamas

"Maybe we'll bring some of the bunch back with us for a cup of tea or something stronger," remarked Nan airily as she and Vernon went off to the Sunday Morning Pajama Breakfast Club.

* * *

The Sunday morning Pajama Breakfast Club seemed to Vernon a very queer function!

She felt out of her element at the beginning. It was a most free-and-easy gathering.

What on earth did these men and women want to get into pajamas for, and loaf about on divans, at high noon of the radiant Sunday morning?

If Terry had been there, it would have been different, of course. But she was glad Terry wasn't witnessing this stupid spectacle of which she herself was a part.

Half the people looked as though they hadn't been to bed at all — as though the cat had brought them in with the milk in the morning.

She felt rather silly in the long blue velvet pajamas Nan had dug out for her. They needed living up to—Vernon didn't have the key to what was going on, here, hither and yonder.

Everyone seemed to move in couples. Every man seemed to have his own particular girl.

Nan was out in the kitchen, helping to cook eggs and bacon She had acquired at least three beaux in the process. Amidst the hot, unpleasant odor of cooking, Vernon could hear her delighted squeals

No one seemed to have any manners in the studio. Manners and pajama breakfasts didn't go together, it seemed.

A poet came to talk to her, and read her some execrable verses Everyone was making so much noise that Vernon could hardly hear him

A long-bobbed girl with the unromantic name of Jemima undulated into the studio. The poet sprang at her. They kissed ecstatically. Vernon went out into the kitchen.

The Squeaking Man

Hungry, she salvaged a plate of bacon and eggs for herself, and a cup of coffee. That felt good. Presently she would slip off home, she decided

Suppose Terry telephone, and she wasn't there to get it? Suppose he called in person at the hotel and she missed him? That was unthinkable

Wonderful to be out motoring with him in the brilliant autumn countryside, in that long, low-slung car of his.

She consumed another piece of toast, another cup of coffee, then went back to the studio.

"My dear, the party's positively stupid!" chirruped a high-pitched man's voice in her ear. "Let's brighten up that little corner yonder, and commune With thou his with me thither?"

He was a queer-looking young man, thought Vernon. But any port in a storm. She felt solitary. She seated herself gingerly on the divan whose springs were sadly broken, and permitted him to entertain her in his own quaint fashion.

Extremely willowy in figure, in pajamas of deep purple, his small waist was girdled by a golden cord with heavy tassels. He had a very small face atop a long neck in which the Adam's Apple was prominent. His eyes were watery blue — red-rimmed —and his tiny mouth was topped by an infinitesimal mustache.

Vernon thought whimsically: "He doesn't talk. He squeaks."

Small his mouth might be, but the tongue inside it was exceptionally long. He was the greatest gossip she had encountered.

"My dear, in confidence, the behavior of the debutante this year is too sim-ply ap-pal ling! Why! even the barnyard fowls have better manners!" He cocked his little head on one side, and drew down his upper lip. "I assure you I give them a wide berth. I literally flee from them."

That's surely their misfortune Vernon retorted with a twinkle

"My dear, do listen to Nan Rushington laugh just now. It's positively like the screech of a hyena."

"She's a nice girl. She's my cousin, you know."

"I Like Nan"

"How perfectly appalling for you

"Not at all. I like Nan. She's good-hearted."

"My dear, how can you say such a thing, when she's doing everything possible to break up poor Myrtle Sarrail's marriage?"

"I don't believe it."

"Your eyes, my dear—your beautiful, beautiful eyes—do use them, I beg of you. Conceded that Nan's no better or worse than the others, they're no more —er—standards shall we say?— than a polecat . . . those young girls of today." Twirling at the ends of his small mustache, he rolled his eyes upward as though calling on heaven to witness him.

Vernon felt that she could willingly have slapped him

Suddenly he nudged her violently. "Look—Sugar—and Nan —just as I said—"

It was too true. Nan made a dramatic entrance clinging with both hands to the arm of Sugar, his right arm round her waist

"Doesn't he look divine" I've just dressed him in Bobby's newest ones from London," she called out "Isn't he the handsome thing"

Someone chanted aptly "Why Did I Buy Those Pajamas Before the Big Affair Began . . ."

This brought rounds of sarcastic applause Presently Nan disappeared with Sugar.

"Honeymooning!" This from the hateful young man with the feminine voice.

Vernon rose. She would go home. But the girl called Jemima, and her poet-friend, swept her into a crazy card game called "Michigan"

Left-Overs Can Be Made Into Dishes Any He-Man Will Relish

(From Martha Lee's Wednesday morning broadcast over Station WAAB.)

CAN'T PICK UP a paper or magazine these days without reading articles by male celebrities on real he-man food.

As if women didn't know what they liked after all these years of catering to them!

They tell us they like simple well-seasoned food like steak, chops and roast, and that this idea of men not relishing delicacies is all wrong. They delight in stews, meat pies, braised beef with vegetables and corned beef hash. They like tossed salads. For dessert, brandied apple pie, they want strong cheeses and fruits.

So here goes

MARINATED BEEF
4 lbs. of chuck beef
1 cup vinegar
1 cup water

10 peppercorns
1 onion, sliced
1 blade mace
3 or 2 cloves

Have the beef cut in a piece about two inches thick. Prepare the marinate by bringing the vinegar, water and [illegible] to the boiling point [illegible] over the meat [illegible] cold place [illegible] meat [illegible] and [illegible] Place [illegible] of pork on the [illegible] and cook in [illegible] (325 deg. Remove the meat, strain the liquid, and thicken it, if necessary, with a little flour mixed with cold water, and pour over the meat.

ROAST BEEF SALAD
½ cup mayonnaise
½ teaspoon horseradish mustard
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of white pepper
Dash of paprika
½ cup cooked potatoes, diced
2 cups cooked string beans
1 cup cooked roast beef, diced
Blend mayonnaise, mustard, vinegar, salt, pepper and paprika. Combine with potatoes and beans (cut lengthwise and then crosswise into ½ inch pieces). Chill until ready to serve. Add beef and toss together lightly. Serve on crisp lettuce with radish roses and additional mayonnaise. Serves 6.

CHEESE CAKE

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons sugar
3 eggs
1 cup undiluted evaporated milk

CHAPTER 473

"OH, NO!"

Before I could catch the words back, and almost outside my own volition, my impassioned disclaimer of Dr. Braithwaite's proposal came tumbling from my lips.

There was nothing I could say however. My passionate protest against my brother-in-law's ruling seemed to cavern around the room, and I waited tensely for the answering words which would come from those frigidly astonished lips.

But when he finally spoke it was my turn to be astonished.

"I have no other choice, Margaret," he said stiffly. Then, lowering his voice almost to a whisper, he went on, amazingly to me, while I listened with a sense of reprieve

"In the light of your revelation to me a little while ago, I fully appreciate the undesirability of sending for Katherine to care for Lee Chow, with Harriet to assist her. But during the next hour there is a certain treatmen which I must give the Chinese, a treatment with which Katherine is familiar.

A MISUNDERSTANDING

"Because of her professional training, Harriet will be able to assist Katherine. I could not risk non professional aid, even as skillful as I am sure yours and Mrs. Underwood's must be Therefore, much as I deplore the necessity, I must throw the two women together

I pulled myself together, thankful that he had misinterpreted the reason for my protest, and anxious to reassure him

I don't think you need anticipate the slightest unpleasantness," I told him. "I am sorry that my first reaction to your news was one of protest because of what I know of Harriet's feelings. I regretted the words even as they left my lips. For you know, even better than I what a thoroughbred Harriet is She will let no word or sign of her feeling—whatever it may be escape her. And Katherine knows nothing of it at all."

Thank heaven for that! Edwin Braithwaite said fervently. 'Now will you and Mrs Underwood go directly to the library and tell Katherine to turn Major Granland's care over to you two — she will show you what is to be done—and send her up here directly" As soon as this crisis is over with Lee Chow, only one nurse will be needed, and Harriet's skill will be sufficient. Katherine can go back to Major Granland and then you and I can resume our interrupted interview I am most anxious to clear up that matter

And I also, Edwin" I said earnestly. "I will get Lillian and go down to the library at once

"Thank you" he said, and wheeling swiftly he went back to the room where Lee Chow's life hung in the balance. Quite as swiftly I went down the hall to Lillian

"What's up?" Lillian asked—

Ten to one, he has to requisition Katrina as well as Harriet for Lee Chow, and wants one or both of us to go down and dance attention upon Hugh?"

"Surveyant!" I exclaimed. "No. Only simple deduction," she said teasingly, taking my arm. "Elementary, my dear Watson elementary." Edwin's manner and your face were open books. But come along, darling! Let's get going!"

Luring Them On

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Good Bridge players allow the opponents to present them with an opportunity to bring home a contract which can be made in no other way.

Good players are usually players of great experience, and most fine plays are no longer new to them.

Hence, they often get their greatest satisfaction from having coaxed the opponents to play the role of Santa Claus.

I wonder how many of my readers, studying all of the hands below, can find a possible way of making four spades

If you can do so, you are a good analyst. It is even more difficult to see the possibility in actual play and employ the winning stratagem.

I watched Dick Frey play it and, almost without apparent thought, give the opponents their chance to slip. They did not fail to take advantage of it.

South dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♢	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Many players might have overcalled with the West hand but to bid either the four-card heart or club suit at the level of two would be unsound, and the hand is not strong enough for a takeout double. North's two-diamond response showed two honor-tricks and South therefore made a jump rebid

West opened the King of hearts and a rapid count of losers convinced declarer that it was going to be impossible to avoid the loss of four club tricks, because as soon as he attempted to play clubs without drawing trumps the opponents would lead trumps for him and draw almost two spades before a club could be ruffed

South swiftly determined that only entirely would save the day. Accordingly, he ducked the opening heart lead in dummy despite his own singleton.

It would be a little unfair to criticize West for not making the brilliant shift to trumps. If declarer wanted to keep his Ace of hearts, the natural reaction of the opponents would be to take steps to take it away from him.

Consequently, West continued with the Queen. Dummy's Ace won and the Ace of diamonds, which had blocked that suit, was discarded.

Then, on the King and Queen of diamonds, declarer discarded two of his small clubs, ruffed trumps, and at the end cheerfully conceded the last two club tricks to his opponents.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is This A 50-50 Or 100% Marriage?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
Four years ago I met this man who is now my husband.

He drank, gambled and cut up quite a bit before we married, but I thought he'd settle down and that his habits at that time were not my business.

Now he tells me it was only a trial marriage anyhow, and if I don't like it I may get a divorce. He has continued to drink and gamble.

On the other hand, he gives me all his money, lets me do what I want with it. But I don't think it's fair to spend it when he's working hard every night.

He said marriage is not a 50-50 proposition, that it should be 100 per cent in the man's favor. On year of marriage, which he said is trial, will be up soon. I don't know what my next move will be.

'TRIAL WIFE'

I don't believe your husband was serious when he told you that marriage should be 100 per cent in the man's favor. Bluebeard and Henry the Eighth thought that, but not even their contemporaries went that far. And the fact that he gives you his money and tells you to do what you like with it, proves conclusively that he's much more than a trial husband.

As your letter is too long to print in full, you tell me you do a good deal of arguing and quarreling. Why not cut that out?

DECLINES TO VISIT HIS HOME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For a [illegible] time I've been going with a [illegible] and although we [illegible] yet, we think a [illegible] each other. I've visited [illegible] me to my home and me [illegible] at any time, but [illegible] fathers, saying it [illegible] girl to go to [illegible] me right.

I, [illegible] proper for the [illegible] to your parents [illegible] right-hearted girl [illegible] to going to a [illegible] where there is a [illegible] father. It's quite a different matter from going to a home or apartment where several boys live together. I hope she changes her mind.

WHEN MOTHER INSISTS ON BEING KITTENISH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm 20 years of age, though my mother tells everyone I am 17 and does me as if I were about 12. She and father are divorced, and mother has the comb[illegible]. She isn't bad, she's just silly, and I'm fast losing my respect for her.

She has had lots of beaux, been engaged twice, and each time has broken it off. She doesn't want to marry; she just wants to have lots of young men around, and be cute and kittenish. One of her beaux has fallen in love with me, and I should be very glad to marry him, as I'm sick to death of mother's flightiness, but we don't dare let her know.

My father has married again, and I'd like to go to him. But mother would consider that treachery.

UNHAPPY DAUGHTER.

What is known as a "straight talk" is, it seems to me, due your mother. But please don't undertake it until you can put your case without bitterness, anger or sarcasm. Tell her that at 20 years of age you think it's high time that you had some life of your own. And that you're tired of being "mother's little girl."

If she declines to be reasonable, tell her you've decided to visit your father for a while. And why shouldn't you visit your father? He is as much your parent as your "cute and kittenish" mama.

"HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF"

By Nell Brinkley

"History repeats itself." In the great world affairs, and also in the lesser affairs of Woman's Fashions. Fashion! That seems unimportant to a man—who, just the same is somewhat absorbed in the matter of the color-vibration between his suit and his tie! But it is very important to a woman. She knows very well that her plumage is a part of what she means to both the stranger and to those who love her.

A newspaper man studied a picture of little Anne Lindbergh. Said he, "I always have liked the way she dressed!" There you are. The men DO notice!

And that a man notices, means that Cupid notices, too. HE is just the same—seeing that he wears no clothes at all—as he was back on the hills of Greece, his home. But the feminine creature who interests him so much, changes fashion gayly and OFTEN—and surprisingly.

Now she has turned back the pages to Ancient Greek Costume. You are going to see Helen of Troy, Dionea, and Hero, at many a party you go to this Winter. The same simplicity, clinging straight. The same line of waist. The girdle. The embroidered borders. And look at the sandals!—even to the heelless skin shoe. Though we do them in satin and silk. The filleted hair. And for the day time—the WAR BONNET

Cupid says, "The lady changes—but I do not; I am the same boy who roamed marble streets and the paths of Olympus. And let me tell you that outwardly woman may change—but beneath the changing dress SHE too is the same—just a lady, as was Helen of Troy —interested in M[illegible]"

When Your Child Misbehaves

PRAISE GOOD CHILD, IGNORE NAUGHTY ONE

DEAR, DEAR!—whatever can be the matter with Johnny Jones!

He's deliberately broken his favorite toy!

Well, you see, he gets attention by being naughty. Dear, there on the left—his parents who know better. They praise her when she's good, and ignore her when she misbehaves.

It's natural for children to crave attention. Most of them would rather be spanked than ignored. Think this over if you've a troublesome child to deal with a child who's constantly doing exasperating things. Ask yourself if, possibly, you aren't at fault. Try a change of tactics. Make a point of noticing the child when he does things you approve of. Praise him for remembering to wash his hands before dinner, for hanging up his clothes neatly, for carrying out little tasks about the house. When he does misbehave, avoid making a fuss. Try not to scold. It may be necessary to punish the child, but do it calmly.

Using Objectionable Words

Another way children try to get attention is by using expressions their parents disapprove of. Sooner or later they discover they can shock you by coming out with a swear word. At first the child uses objectionable words innocently, without any idea of what they stand for. They are just new words—until he sees how you react to them. If you show that you're shocked, the youngster feels he has created a mild sensation, and thoroughly enjoys it. It's best, the first time undesirable words are used, to let them pass without notice. Then, if the child continues to use them, explain that such expressions are used only by people who don't know any better. And try to interest him in other new words that are more wholesome.

This subject of attention-getting devices is more fully discussed in our 40-page booklet, YOUR CHILD'S FIRST YEARS. Written by an authority on children. It offers many commonsense solutions to child problems. Here are some of its topics.

Return Engagement Gifts

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am asking this information for a friend of mine. She became engaged last winter and received an engagement ring and a number of gifts. She has now decided to break the engagement, stating that $10 a week is not enough to get along on, that she must have $75 a week income. Is it compulsory to return the ring? Also the gifts? Or should he put it in the hands of a lawyer for settlement.

W.

Since the young woman has decided to break the engagement, she should at once return the engagement ring and the other gifts that she has received from her ex-fiance.

A right-minded girl always does this, and at once. And she also returns to friends any engagement or wedding presents that she has received, with a note saying that the engagement has been broken by mutual consent.

And I would like to say to the young woman who writes me that she has been left on the shelves of the number of desirable dancing partners she has by her engagement.

If the girl doesn't return the ring and gifts, what the ex-fiance does about this situation depends on what kind of a man he is. He may sit tight or he may let it go into the hands of a lawyer. [illegible] man employed in a legal dispute over the return of an engagement ring makes a ter[illegible] of any spectacle.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Strawberry Cream Mask

Leaves Skin Radiantly Fresh

By Arline Gould

DO YOU agree with the Kipling heroine who said that women are most charming at thirty?

Verree Teasdale, glamorous golden star and one of Hollywood's pet daughters, is convincing proof of the fact that beauty need not end at twenty.

"With care and consideration, a woman can retain her youthful complexion, her gleaming hair, her wide, clear eyes — all [illegible] she says. Verree [illegible] time and trouble, of course. But no sacrifice is [illegible] of the points, some of the [illegible] face.

"It means giving up some of the [illegible] fattening pastries and sweets. It means spending at least a half hour every night and 15 minutes every morning in cleansing and lubricating your skin."

October is the time to wrestle with your complexion. Plan to [illegible] up the circulation and indulge in a few [illegible] to good-[illegible] fresh. The effort of having pale, white-tired figures hovering over you with scented creams and [illegible] attentions is priceless.

Question: I am fifteen years old and in high school. I always had a clear white skin until I got chicken pox last July. I was very careful not to scratch my face, but I had a very severe case. THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Apparently the Social Revolution hit Boston on Monday evening in its most polite and full-dressed manifestation. It was none of your vulgar mass meetings.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The fact that it was held in the Copley-Plaza and cost a dollar to get in took care of that. In the New Yorker the notice would have been printed with a couple of asterisks (*) meaning "better dress, although not obligatory."

The occasion was the first open meeting in Boston of the National Credit Association, which has during the past year been sponsored locally by Mrs. E. Sohier Welch, wife of the well-known lawyer, trustee, yachtsman and gourmet. This National Credit Association, you understand, has nothing to do with the National Credit Men's Association, which is made up of the men who decide how long they can give you to pay a bill—or else!

It is the American branch, affiliated, I suppose, with a British organization founded to spread the ideas of a certain Major Douglas, who believes that he has found the way to clear up the present economic mess.

The Upper Classes Must Have Their Credit

Surprisingly enough, the tenets of Social Credit has caught the attention of the British upper classes and the Established Church. Perhaps not so surprisingly, though, as the depression has tended increasingly to dry up the springs of credit and to make it more rigid, less free and flexible. And it is the people with some money who depend most on credit.

Anyway, no sooner had the Province of Alberta voted a somewhat hazy policy of modified social credit, based upon Douglas' ideas, than an eminent English ecclesiastic a bishop I think, beat it over to Canada with the true milk of the word, and even went so far as to consult with Father Coughlin, in whom the Douglas-ites pretend to see a concert to their views.

And that is how a small but fashionable Boston audience in evening dress and black ties was able to luxuriate in the presence of, and in the gospel according to, the Very Reverend Hewlett Johnson, D.D., Dean of Canterbury. Not quite an archbishop, of course, but at least basking familiarly in the splendor of that presence. Obviously he gave the occasion tone.

The English ecclesiastical costume of the higher clergy, even in undress, is pretty impressive. Nowhere else in the world exists such a thing as an English bishop's or dean's silk apron or long buttoned leggins, or even the dwarf silk hat with the strings which attach the brim to the rim. It is a get-up which makes even a fashionable Boston audience feel properly set up.

Even the Heckling in Best Possible Taste

Mr. Christian Herter, in a strictly neutral and refereeing capacity, presided on the platform and did an excellent imitation of George Coleman in his Ford Hall specialty. The heckling, needless to say, was in the best possible taste.

People who know all about Dr. Townsend and Father Coughlin might be interested in learning something about the Douglas plan. Briefly, we are all suffering because the bankers control all the credit and dole it out in so niggardly a fashion that none of us can spend as much as we should like to spend. Or as much as the wealth of the country in trade really allows us to spend.

Japan, for instance, understands that and is really subsidizing its industries by credit so that Japanese goods are everywhere capturing markets—say, the New England textile market—hitherto closed to them. The result is that business is booming there.

Subsidize the Jobless, You Understand—I Don't

The Douglas plan proposes to subsidize the unemployed or even all the population with a fixed sum per month, in the expectation that the population will spend that extra sum on goods at marked-down prices, prices for which industry will be reimbursed by the government.

This will mean a greater volume business and therefore greater credit to do business upon. The government will guarantee the credit against this larger volume of trade. The government can always be financing itself, instead of depending on a private banking system, thus spending huge sums for the use of credit which it might just as well furnish itself out of its limitless resources.

This is a method which Mr. Arthur Brisbane has been championing consistently for a good many years. I don't quite understand it, myself, but it may be a quite popular debating topic this winter among the better classes.

WOMAN'S PLACE IN THE HOME

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Annice Brink

Ethel Leed has done a Mr. Hyde and Dr. Jekyll.

She's the actress daughter of the socially powerful Adolf Leeds family of Boston.

On the Boston stage (Copley Theater) she appeared invariably as a slank, nasty lady with a red cast to her soul (literly beautiful, but necessitous a costume Mr. Hyde

But on a New York engagement, her stage character was put into reverse. She was cast as an unsophisticated high-bred type

And orders from her director were that she must stay "made over." The villainess was wiped out of her profes sional slate.

ANNICE BRINK

Speaking of being made over—there's Barbara McKissock, of Brookline and the Cape.

Today one of New York's dazzling fashion models, last year she was a rather shy and retiring debutante.

A walk like a Ziegfeld show girl's and posture becoming to her long grace are "Siddy's" gift from a three months' stay in Overgrown City. She particularly prizes being all on her own, staying within a tiny budget.

"Boston debutante would be smarter," says Siddy, "better poised, mentally broadened, and made much more interesting as people if they could mingle with New Yorkers before coming out.

And, here's one for you, Mr. James Montgomery Flagg!

New York may monopolize beautiful women, but handsome men are such a rarity that a girl is tempted to turn around and stare if one crosses her path. But Boston, ah, that's another story.

Society Girl Chants Blue Songs of Own Creation

Nancy Whitman, one of the Last Boston society girls who went in for a night club, writes songs as well as sings them.

Some were arranged by Ray Pugh and played at the Den in West Falmouth this summer, where she sang. Her blue chants were particularly intriguing.

And now we just wonder . . . were are two of them "I'm on the Market For a New Somebody to Love" and "How've You Been?"

Slave Jewelry Latest; Snoods Also Make Bow

Slave-chain fanciers must be responsible for the newest jewelry idea—to lock up your wrists.

No, not handcuffs. They're antique-gold-finished bracelets I found in Jordan's jewelry section. Heavy rope links, they clasp with a doughty padlock.

Schiaparelli went in for snoods in her last showing. They're the starchy mesh veils for the back of the head that were so popular with Victorian girls, who knew a thing or two about allure.

And a snood has arrived in Boston, at R. H. Stearns, trimming an adorable little affair of black felt that sits over your eye like a beret. A ruffle of felt runs across the crown.

You'd be surprised how attractively a snood sets off a coiffure, whether it's short curls or a shining knot.

Bow on Knee of Frock Naughty but Very Tricky

Don't ask why, but there's something very naughty and tricky about a bow on the knee of a frock.

Schiaparelli knew it when she designed a dance frock, a copy of which is in Chandler's Fashion League Shop.

It's a picture frock, but with a gay, dance-with-me air. The hem, banded and faced with turquoise blue taffeta, swings up to the instep in front.

Its drop shoulders are decorated (and there's a suspicion they're also held up) by an attached necklace of turquoise beads and old gold.

Two Color Partnership Suggested by New Frocks

So many suits stress a two-color partnership in themselves that you simply must carry it out in accessories.

That's where the two-tone low-cut oxfords at C. Crawford Hollidge's Delmonte shop do noble duty. They come in green and brown suede, kid trimmed, and wine crocodile on black suede.

Tomorrow—Ann Masters will be the "Girl About Town."

Mrs. Ames In Song Debut

NEW YORK IS SCENE

Ending a seclusion of nearly three years since the death of her aviator husband, Mrs. Frederick Lothrop Ames of Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay, will make her concert debut next Sunday night in Town Hall, New York.

On November 6 the wealthy Freddy Ames was killed with Miss Frances Burnett, Southboro society girl, and Frank B. Sproul, Harvard graduate, when Ames' plane went into a spin and crashed in Randolph.

Since then his pretty, brunette widow, mother of his one child has resumed her vocal instruction.

Not since before her marriage, when she was Mme Maurice Mostelle, French auto racer, singing insurance and assistant coach of the Curacao Opera Company, has she sung in public and never on the concert stage.

Classical Program

With Frank Bibb as her piano accompanist, Maurice Ames, who has a rich mezzo-soprano voice, will feature Brahms, Strauss, Ravel, Verdi and Grieg in a well-balanced program Sunday night in New York's Town Hall.

She is under the management of George Leyden College of New York, and next Sunday's is expected to be only the first in a series of voice concerts by the young widow.

Ames met the French girl in January, 1928, at the Club Royal, in Sonora, Mexico, just across the border from Nogales, Texas. She was singing in the club. Twenty days later they were married at Tucson, Arizona, and Ames brought his bride back to his own plane in Boston, where she became an immediate favorite in the younger social set.

She is now a flier in her own right.

CHILDREN NEEDED

Below is the third of a series of comments by well-known Boston residents on marriage and the value of Boston's proposed "marriage clinic".

Inspiration for the new organization is the problem of the children in unhappy homes.

The Marriage Study Association, Inc., which will establish the clinic, is headed by Professor Joseph H. Beale of Harvard law school.

BY PEGGY DOYLE

The ten best rules for a happy marriage are the commandments God gave to Moses on Mount Sinai.

From out of his rich experience of more than thirty years on the Municipal Court bench and of forty-odd years of happy married life, kindly, white-haired Judge Michael H. Sullivan, dean of Boston's domestic relations court, has evolved a somewhat more modern code.

Dispensing with the "thou shalt not's" and "thou shalt's" of the black tome, and yet invoking the authority of his office, he answered, simply:

"The Ten Commandments are the best thing I know to follow for successful marriage."

It was old Diogenes who, it is said, first put forward the notion that humans with old-fashioned problems that, despite their tricks, new labels, are more than nineteen hundred years old. He said:

"Only the setting changes—the trials and tribulations I hear unburdened in my courtroom daily are as old as time.

"And no marriage clinic, no matter how astute and humane the splendid men and women who compose it, can solve these age-old problems any more than any outside influence could have averted that little tiaden of Eden incident.

"Happiness in married life does not come from secret knowledge of a few rules. Happiness in marriage, as in every other state in life, rests upon foundations deep down in the heart. Yet there are some obvious truths.

"Happiness in marriage depends upon unity. That, it would seem, is the very key to the problem.

Like his fellow jurist, Judge McCosh, one of Judge Murray's favorite axioms about marriage is that no home is complete without children.

"Children in the home often are the bridges by which the threat of difficulties and misunderstandings are crossed without disaster. They are not only a source of endless joy but are a genuine safeguard as well.

I have found in many cases where a father or a mother seemed to be hopelessly apart that a reunion could be effected by agreeing to forget about their unselfish love for their child's

Did he believe that women could successfully combine two careers—that of managing a home as well as a job outside it—confine?

"Home," Judge Murray responds, "is woman's creation and, I reiterate, children are one of its component parts.

"A mother's life is one of love, devotion and sacrifice. It is a full-time job and she asks no greater reward than that her children grow up into fine men and women. You don't read much of mothers in today's page—and that's their glory."

Another in this series will be published in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

Whiskey Must Be Year Old, Says U.S.

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 16—The Federal Alcohol Administration is defined who are tentatively today to conform with the march of science in distilling."

The new definitions were contained in regulations issued by Franklin C. Hoyt, United States admin strator. The definitions include:

Straight whiskey, a product which has been aged in charred oak barrels for a minimum of one year before bottling. By June 30, 1936, the FAA hopes to extend the age to two years.

Wayland Mannings Feted At Many Socials

By BETTY ALDEN

WHEN WAYLAND MANNING and his bride, the former Miss Ellen Cushing, eloped in August, the realization that a romance had been existing between them was a complete surprise to all their friends, and the immediate departure of the newlyweds to Europe for their honeymoon left no possible opportunity for congratulations or best wishes to be extended . . . But now that the bride and groom are back in town, their apartment on West Cedar street (formerly Miss Cushing's home) is almost constantly the scene of small informal tea parties and gatherings of close friends who drop in to greet the newlyweds . . .

MRS. CHARLES WILLARD

Mr. Manning, who is 66, the same age as his bride, is treasurer of the Episcopal diocesan council of Massachusetts, but frequently indulges his hobby of fashioning fine pottery . . . Mrs. Manning's garden, which brightens the courtyard at the rear of her home, has frequently been visited by garden lovers on the Beacon Hill garden pilgrimages . . .

The many family connections of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Prouty are preparing to kill the fatted calf in honor of this well-known couple, who are returning to their "old country" next week . . . The Proutys are on the high seas, bound for reunion on Beacon Hill, where many luxurious drawing rooms will be opened for parties in their honor . . .

AUSTEN LAKE

Blue-Blood Beast Discovery's Pampered Luxury

THERE IS THE SAME! slit-eyed air of mistrus about the Suffolk Downs horse-stall where Discovery the society giddyap, is quartered for today's $25,00 gallop, as is found about the train ing camp of a heavyweight figh champion or challenger just befor the important business.

Austen Lake

The same stout odors of mystery and suspicion. The same wordly anc wrong-living citizens and the same wary watchmen eyeing all ap proaches for professional no-goods who might wish to drop a shovelfu of distress into the champion's barley-mash or chicken gumbo.

It is possible that none of the mischievous low-lifes who lurk abou the place would poke any poisonous pills into Discov ery's gullet or any rubber plugs into his air holes. Just as, maybe, no sinister characters among the many pres ent at Pompton Lakes hoped to shake a paralysis powder into Joe Louis' family soup kettle on the eve of his rendezvous with Max Baer.

But the wardens take no risks. A swarm of taimen and muscular swipes are always engrossed, in doing nothing before Discovery's call, just as metropolitan troopers were always sleeping with their eyes open in Louis' kitchen, ready to slug any intruder.

Horse Royalty

HAVING THE ADVANTAGES of being mute, Discovery is not troubled by autograph hunters or pestered for press opinions. His energies and time are not consumed by vanity-tickling persons. He is never sued by alimony-wishing women for heart money. No process servers haunt his hallways.

But his waterbottles are sealed with the same distinctive markings as those of the glove fighters, and presided over by watchmen wise in the ways of professional sport. A tamper-proof grill shuts out a half circle of curious humans who come to peer at horse royalty, the same look of wonderment on their faces as the fringe of dark worshippers who at a little distance, blessed Louis with their eyes.

No pampered chorus-wife of an American dollar noble receives such tender attentions as this racing beast. A temperature chart hangs outside, with hourly readings of its internal heat. Its daisby racing shoes, an alloy of silver and aluminum, are buts of delicate jewelry fashioned by a personal farrier.

Its timothy hay, carrot greens and clover are imported from the choice grass lands of New York. Unguents from the East n its coat. Its drink is barrelled spring water.

Growing Pains, Again!

COLLEGE JOURNALISTS HAVE always been cocklebur in the pants of varsity athletics. Due to juvenile acidity and othe adolescent fermentations, they like to snipe at conventions, ble editorial paper snakes and snowball tradition.

College authorities suffer them as an indulgent parent trea youthful colic, muscle-bends and brib sweats, feeling that the boy will be better fitted to outgrow rebellion through snorting smoke and cinders.

Thus the Daily Pennsylvanian, as Penn's student organ, comments on the "humiliating" defeat by Yale on Saturday, and, in an editorial by its chief, says

"For the first half they looked like champs; for the second half like champs . . . The Penn team was probably scared of (Ed. note: Iak, Tsk: bad grammar) the crowd of 62,000 and scored three touchdowns in the first half. But they recovered their poise in the second half and played their usual game."

In the law courts this would be termed malicious persecution. But in college journalism it is merely the exhalations of a youthful vertigo which, like bad breath, is cured by gargling a little adult salt.

As an official of the Penn Princeton game and, therefore, in close contact with the Penn players, I can testify that they bled and battled bitterly after having their 6-0 lead swept away by Princeton's one, sustained drive in the closing minutes. And at least two of the lads wept from frayed nerves and disappointment as they were led off the field.

Babe Returns to Cradle

ONE OF THE ODDITIES of the season is the sight of Babe Ruth stretching out the baseball season with an independent ball club in a tour of semi-pro fields near New York.

When he burst his bonds with the Braves last June, he had said gladly that he would set aside his player's uniform forever and devote himself to golf, fishing and the domestic joys of being a father.

Now he is averaging $1000 a game for Sunday play, putting in a full nine-innings before the factory crowds in the cobblestone ends of town.

Pat and Pancho

PAT KNEBELKAMP, one of the picturesque characters of the turf, has entered his stake horse, King Saxon, in Narragansett's "Winter meet." He is one of the quaint people whose strange antics have added to the literature of the horse track. His experience with Pancho Villa, the Mexican bandit, is one of the legends of racing.

As a prime sucker for the ponies and a paddock simpleton for the touts, Villa visited the Juarez track in the old days when Knebelkamp was racing a horse named Soap Box.

Sidling up to Pat, Villa asked what the horse's chances were in the ensuing race.

"He can't lose. He is as good as a winner now," said the owner.

A pair of pearl-handled shooting irons peeped from holsters on Villa's corduroy hips. The bandit squinted his hot eyes down to narrow slits, fixing Pat with a long look. He tapped his gun butts thoughtfully, squirted an amber jet through his teeth, and finally said, "He'd better not lose."

"It was the way he said it," related Knebelkamp. "That slow, insinuating drawl."

Pat took no chances on disappointing Pancho. He scratched the horse.

Both Have Done It

Which Scene Will Be Duplicated Today?

Discovery, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's champion thoroughbred, is s[wamping] the Merchants and Citizens Handicap at Saratoga Springs, Aug. 10. [Ridden] by Jean Stout, the 39 pounds, the stout hearted son of Display won the [two] heats to the great [delight] of A. A. Baroni's Top R[ow] [fans] the $25,000 Massa[chusetts] [Handicap]

Vanderbilt Horse Carries $50,000 In Massachusetts Handicap

By Jack Conway

Suffolk Downs, Oct. 16 —Forty thousand persons turned out today to see Discovery oppose Top Row, Time Supply, Count Arthur and a field of other fleet thoroughbreds over the mile and an eighth distance in the $25,000 Massachusetts Handicap.

Weather conditions for the great race were ideal. A warm sun beat down on the track which was particularly fast.

Discovery was the people's choice. It was expected that the wonder horse would go to the post a tops on favorite.

Top Row, which beat Discovery at Narragansett Park, Count Arthur and Time Supply also had heavy backing.

Many persons who thought Discovery was the class horse in the race were nevertheless playing another horse on account of the odds. They didn't want to support a tops on favorite.

SURE THING

The sure thing gamblers planned to bet large amounts of money on Discovery to place and show. Under the Massachusetts law a show payoff must be at least $2.20.

Allen Wilson, general manager of Suffolk Downs, predicted that the mutuel handle on the big race would come close to $125,000. He looked for a mutuel handle of close to $100,000 for the day.

It was expected that $50,000 would be bet on Discovery alone.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, youthful owner of Discovery, flew here from New York for the race. But Stoller, trainer of Discovery, told Vanderbilt that his horse is in splendid condition and that he will win today.

More than 20 New York turf writers came here by special train to see the race. On the special from New York were many notables who wished to get a peek at Discovery in what may be his last appearance in a stake race in the East this season.

Johnny Bejshak will be the jockey up on Discovery. He knows the power in his mount and will make his move at the proper time. At Narragansett Park Discovery [was] the [last] to start. The big horse [was] [slow] in the stretch run and was beaten a length and a half by Top Row.

Discovery carried 133 pounds at Narragansett, while he will [carry] 126 pounds in addition to Top Row had 110 pounds in addition to [his] effort in the Narragansett race. Count Arthur will have to carry 116 pounds today.

Count Arthur won the Manhattan Handicap at Belmont. He is a class horse and will be [a] [formidable] New York money [horse] if it goes to the post today.

Those persons who don't like odds-on favorites will give Top Row and Count Arthur attention before they make their wagers.

WOOLF UP

Whopper won the $10,000 Azzarawam Handicap a week ago, and is in fine condition for the big test today.

Whopper has been [shipped] to Suffolk Downs from Belmont Park. If he can get away [fast] he should surprise some of the [more] experts who figure it is a three-horse race among Discovery, Top Row and Count Arthur.

George Woolf will be up on Top Row. He was the jockey on the famous Azucar when the former Irish jumper won the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap last winter.

Wayne Wright was up on Count Arthur when he won over Discovery at Narragansett. Baroni tried to get Wright for today's race, but the latter's contract-owner signed him to ride Count Arthur.

In addition to the purse of $25,000, the owner of each horse in the field [pays] $150 to enter.

Walter O'Hara and Mrs. O'Hara will be in the clubhouse rooting for Howard to win. Howard was only beaten by a length by Discovery in the Narragansett Special.

Howard is a [big] [favorite] [here] If he is in the contention when the thoroughbreds hit the stretch he will give a fine account of himself. Stand Pat has been at Suffolk Downs for two weeks and has been specially [primed] for today's race.

Rosyex, Paternoster and Ann O'Hara have also been [shown] good [early] form.

Discovery will be facing the best field of horses he has met [since] his season. In his [last] race Discovery was [beaten] a length and a half at Narragansett Park by Top Row and Count Arthur [was] [third] at the [finish] in Chicago.

The Massachusetts Handicap is the [fifth] race on today's card of eight races. Discovery and the other thoroughbreds will go [shooting] out of the Bahr gate about 4 p. m. to 4.15 p. m.

There are first class fields in the other seven races. Post time for the first race is 1.30 p. m.

The big interest, however, is in the Massachusetts Handicap. It is the kind of stake race that has tremendous public appeal.

Which do you [think] will win?

METTLE BEST BET AT SUFFOLK

Wilson Banks on Synod in Featue

By Dave Wilson
(Selections Made for Fast Track)

....Suffolk Downs, Oct. 16—Head-scratching reached a new high with the handicappers here this afternoon when Racing Secretary Charles McLennan hit them smack between the eyes with the featured Record Handicap.

This event, which is patterned for three-year-olds and upwards at one mile and a sixteenth, has attracted ten evenly matched starters and promises to develop into one of the most wide-open betting affairs of the meeting.

I'm stringing along with Synod, C. V. Whitney's temperamental colt, to cop the pot, but he is far from a cinch with Garden Message, Sun Apollo, Biography, On Rush and other good ones parading postwards.

For a best bet this observer is stringing along with Mettle in the one mile and 70 yards of the nightcap. This mare appears to outclass her opposition

FIRST—NOTICE ME, TRAMWAY, LOTTAFUN

Stringing along with Will-Tum Gallagher's NOTICE ME in this wide-open affair. This youngster did not fare so well at Agawam, but he evidently did not like that track. Going back to previous Rockingham form I find that he turned in a corking third to Onus and Far and Fast. TRAMWAY is lone start over this track was in the nature of a conditioner and should not be taken too seriously. LOTTAFUN's last three races have all been good. She gets in nicely under a feather of 103 pounds

SECOND—GENERAL PULASKI, HEEDLESS GAL, CURRANTS

GENERAL PULASKI'S lone effort over the local track may be tossed into discard. He did not fancy the sticky footing that prevailed that day. Going back to previous New York races, he looks all over a winner. HEEDLESS GAL turned in a bang-up second to Witan last trip. The Hallcoat colorbearer figures best of the others on the strength of that performance. CURRANTS displayed marked improvement and must be accorded a chance

THIRD—LADY CHARMIAN, NEITHERONE, OPHELIA

String along with LADY CHARMIAN to down the highly-fancied NEITHERONE in thi anumber. She is dropping 1 pounds, and I look for her to kiss the judge smack atop his bald dome. NEITHERONE shapes up as the probable favorite on the strength of her recent good race behind Tinkling Brook. OPHELIA was accorded heavy support against better ones last time. She failed to measure up to expectations that day, but she may do better in this affair.

FOURTH—ALL FORLORN, OUR MAE, BROWN JACK

ALL FORLORN, third to Brown Jack, turned in a winning performance that day considering that she was in close quarters practically the entire journey. She will be favored by an outside post position in this affair and should make amends. OU RMAE didn't drub much in the way of horses last time, but she ran the six furlongs in 1:11 2-5. A repetition of that performance would make her all dangerous. BROWN JACK is good as his last winning performance

FIFTH—SYNOD, GARDEN MESSAGE, SUN APOLLO

SYNOD needs only to duplicate his last winning performance in order to earn brackets in this affair. GARDEN MESSAGE ducked out of today's racing to await this spot. He was assigned three pounds off a recent third to Crystal Prince and even up in the Columbus Day Claiming Stakes. SUN APOLLO did not do badly to finishing third to Beefsteak last time. His merits a fighting chance

SIXTH—SHEPHERD BOY, LAST ROMANCE, OUR ADMIRAL

SHEPHERD BOY, on general form, shapes up as much the best here. The Mooney color bearer placed to Lotta Ars in a swiftly run dash last time out. LAST ROMANCE, a staying stretch runner, figures to be along in time to save the place award from OUR ADMIRAL. He finished third to Quasimodo last time. OUR ADMIRAL's last effort goes for the old gent that manicures the morgue.

SEVENTH—METTLE, ADAMITE, WAR PLANE

METTLE has been sprinting and will be coming up razor sharp. The route is fully within the realm of her staying powers. Previous dope discloses that she has drubbed better ones over the same route. Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by ADAMITE. He showed a good third to Top High last time. WAR PLANE has evidently gone back a long ways in the betting, but class entitles him to some sort of a chance.

ENGLISH Crams for SEASON

MEET GROTON SATURDAY

By Will Connell

They're cramming for the first 1935 football exam at Boston English, where large Edd Ohrenberger is doing the usual five weeks' preliminary work in a bit more than two weeks.

First test comes this Saturday at Groton School and if English doesn't flunk it may be off for another perfect season try. Last year Enghsh lost only to Latin, and the year before dropped one game.

But for the 2nd, I start English [illegible] have been ready to roll [illegible] row.

Giant Squad

A first day turnout of 385 boys made some kind of record. The squad of course has shrunk but that initial enlistment shows the remarkable hold football has at the school.

Charley McPhail, veteran right end, stands six feet high and weighs 182. Center George Ryan is the second English veteran.

Quarterback Tom Powers, a [illegible] brother John at one-halfback, and Fred Leahy, another [illegible] at the other half, and Ed Cowbiz at full.

Lettermen

Lettermen in that lineup are Leahy, Tom Powers, Mantos, Joe Ahearn, a halfback; James Daly, end, and Joe Spinelli, varsity right tackle, who's out with injured knee, also won letters.

Subs include Joe Haggerty, Roy Williams, James P. Sullivan and Ed Meleph, Walter Carlson, John McLaughlin, Bill Stewart, John Sheehan, Harold Shea, and Paul Hallivan, backs.

FRANK LONERGAN REVERE STANDOUT

FAVORED OVER SPEEDY EVENT

By Sam Cohen

Frank Lonergan, speedy star of the Jess Bingham kennels, looks like the winner of the feature event at Wonderland Park tonight.

The tried and true veteran and derby winner will meet stern opposition from Speedy Event, the Gus Maies entry, and Sky, Freda Koonts' flash, but should walk off with the major award.

Bud Sunday's The Motorman is in there as well for a piece of it, but on the basis of his last two outings doesn't figure to bother much

FIRST RACE—3-16THS MILE—IRISH ROLL—JUSTA SUNBEAM—DUCHESS FAROLA

5 Irish Roll	7-1	83	D. J. Marsh	Best in this group.
3 Justa Sunbeam	3-2	81	Gertrude Frederick	Has good speed.

4 Illusion	20-1	78	Golden Bear Ken.	First start here

IRISH ROLL has the call here with a fair group of dogs. JUSTA SUNBEAM is on the upgrade and may take it all. DUCHESS FAROLA has had some good workouts recently and may upset the line.

SECOND RACE—FUTURITY—TARRAS RUNNER—BUCK WHIRLWIND—CEDAR MAID

7 Tarras Runner	5-1	85	W. B. J. Kennels	Oughtto take this.

4 The Motorman	10-1	81	Bud Sunday	Not with these
6 Ridge Lady	12-1	83	Dennis Leahy	Hasn't the speed.

FRANK LONERGAN ought to take this one at this distance without too much trouble. SPEEDY EVENT and SKY will fight it out for second honors. The others hardly count.

3 Speedy Lad	5-1	87	Whitehead Kennels	Looks best here.

Mr. Boston Rates Attell At Top

By JACK CONWAY

THE 15-ROUND world feather-weight championship bout between Freddy Miller and Vernon Cormier at the Garden on next Tuesday night has caused me to rate some of the feather-weight kings I have seen in action.

Take a peek at these ratings and then tell me I am wrong.

No. 1—Abe Attell.

No. 2—Johnny Dundee.

No. 3—Johnny Kilbane.

No. 4—Freddy Miller.

No. 5—Eugene Criqui.

No. 6—Kid Chocolate.

No. 7—Battalino.

Mr. Boston

I considered Attell the perfect fighter. He did everything right when under fire in the ring.

Jimmy Walsh was Attell's rival when both of these men were bantamweights. Attell, however, was able to outbox the clever Walsh.

Abe then went on to the feather-weight class, and Johnny Coulon became Walsh's rival. A difference in weight always kept these men from meeting.

Al Delmont, one of the greatest boxers of his day, was Walsh's chief local opponent. They furnished some stirring action.

Attell was able to spot the average run of boxers ten pounds and win.

K. O. Valentine Brown was tearing through the lightweight division when Attell was feather-weight king. Brown had scored two wins over Ad Wolgast and, with Dan Morgan as his manager, was the talk of New York.

Attell was at his best the night he fought Brown. He had the cockerel, Brown diving through the ropes as he missed wild punches. Abe won easy.

KILBANE

JOHNNY Kilbane won the title from Attell in a 20-round bout on the coast. Attell was on the way out as a headliner at the time. Kilbane couldn't have beaten half of Attell when the latter was at his best.

Kilbane tried to take a page from the book of Attell and battle lightweights. He made the mistake of clashing with Benny Leonard in Philadelphia and got knocked out.

Kilbane went back to the feather-weight division. He once fought Jimmy Walsh at the old Arena and was held to a draw.

Eugene Criqué of France won the featherweight championship by knocking out Kilbane.

I always considered Criqué one of the most courageous boxers I have ever seen in action. He had been a soldier during the war, and had a silver plate attached to part of his jaw.

Criqué defended his title against Johnny Dundee a few weeks after he stopped Kilbane. Dundee let fly with a wild left hook in the first round.

The punch landed on Criqué's jaw and knocked the silver plate out of position. It cut a jagged wound in his mouth, and blood came pouring from the open wound.

The referee wanted to stop the fight, but Criqué insisted upon carrying on. It took the Frenchman's seconds three rounds to stop the flow of blood. The gallant Criqué went the full 15 rounds, but lost his title.

KID CHOCOLATE

KID Chocolate was a great colored boxer and a sharp puncher. The Kid" would have gone down in ring history as a fine immortal if he could have withstood the temptations of Harlem.

He liked night life and it got him. He'd today put up with whatever he can appearing at small boxing clubs in Cuba.

Freddy Miller ranks with some of the best of the oldtime champions. He has boxing class as well as a punch. He has also displayed a willingness to meet all comers.

A year ago he went to Europe and won 32 bouts in a row while abroad. Proving himself to be a real fighting man.

'Pop' Warner Play

HAS FIVE MEN LEADING BALL CARRIER

By L. B. Pat Hanley
Head Coach of Football at Boston University.

(Copyright by Boston Evening American.)

Pop Warner, the grand old man of football, is probably the most colorful character in the grid game today.

Most of the basic wingback formations and plays have been traced to Pop directly or indirectly.

In fact, I am one of his disciples, and my Boston University offense is based on the Warner system, although I do use many variations.

Pop is always one step ahead of the other fellow. For example, in most cases, when any team uses an unbalanced line of offense, the strongt his always on the right side of the line.

WEAK SIDE?

Now Pop also realizes that most teams run better to their right, but instead of using the prosaic methods he starts with an unbalanced line to the left and then runs a weak side reverse to the right.

This play is the one that is diagramed and photographed today. You can be fooled by the term weak side, however, as a play of this sort often develops more power, even a straight buck.

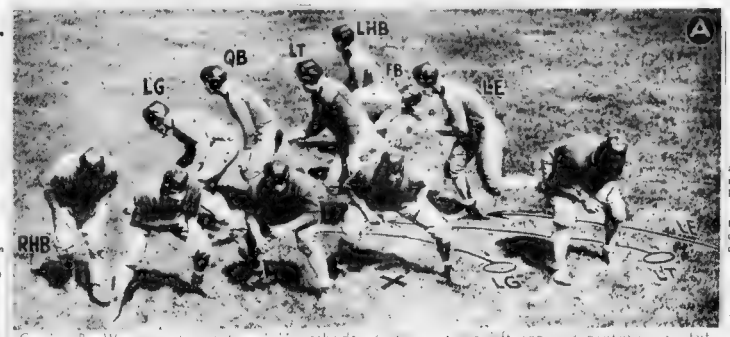
You have your right halfback, your quarterback and three linemen from the strong side smashing through ahead of the ball carrier. And anytime you have five men leading a ball carrier you have power and plenty of it.

LIONS USED IT

The fans who saw the Harvard-Dartmouth game at the Stadium last year should remember the play well, for "Red" Blaik's charges used it with great success.

Last Sunday out at Fenway Park, the Detroit Lions also used a weak side reverse but they ran it with an unbalanced line to the right rather than the left, which is pictured in the diagram.

The next article by Pat Hanley, which is an exclusive Boston Evening American feature, will appear next Monday. He will diagram and explain a reverse which his brother, Dick, used with great success at Northwestern.



Good o a Pop Warner is a strong believer in his weak side reverse. Notice the power in the "A" photo. The team lines up unbalanced with four men to the left of the center. As soon as the ball is passed to the fullback, the left [illegible] from the fullest [illegible] completed a [illegible]

Providence, Oct. 16—Wrestling bout its highest peak since 1930 when 8000 fans jammed the Auditorium here to see Dan O Mahoney successfully defend his heavyweight championship in straight falls from Gus Sonnenberg, once king of the mat men.

The former champion, a home town boy, put up a gruelling bout, having Danno in trouble on several occasions.

The Irish whip won the first fall for Danno in 18:48. Sonny set up a terrific pace at the start of the second fall. He had Danno's mouth split, scissors and Danno bled freely.

Then Gus scored a duset hit with a flying tackle but Danno staged a strong comeback and pinned the Dartmouth Dynamite for the winning fall, again with the whip, in 9:21.

DISCOVERY FAVORITE

Among Suffolk Experts

By Bob Ahearn

Discovery, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's wonder horse, is the odds-on choice to win the first running of the $25,000 Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs this afternoon. At least that is the verdict of the experts.

Allan J. Wilson, general manager of the East Boston layout, is content to state: "The [illegible] horse across the line for mine."

It wouldn't look very well for the head of the association to come out publicly and state his choice to win.

Members of the New York Turf Writers' Association, headed by President Frank Ortell, arrived early this morning to take in the classic. Included in the group was Bill Corum, feature sports writer for the Hearst newspapers.

While Dick Neander, trainer for the horses of Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., is also for Stand Pat. "He's Stand Pat for me." Mickey Brooks, official custodian of the press box, informs everybody, "I have written home to Maryland, Stand Pat." Publicity Director Gus Rooney is also numbered among the backers of the Seagram horse.

JONES Issues Defi to STAR

WANTS TO MEET TRACK CHAMP

By International News Service

Los Angeles, Oct. 16—War broke today between Howard Jones, coach of the one-time "thundering herd" of the University of Southern California and the alumni of the school.

Charlie Paddock, a lumnus and famed sprinter, opened the attack on the veteran coach with the charge that "Trojan football has bogged down."

Jones, whose teams after a disastrous season in 1934 opened the 1935 season in unimpressive style, responded by charging Paddock with "making a lot of statements he can't back up."

The head man at the Trojan camp declared yesterday that he be "perfectly willing to go into a huddle with Paddock any time he wants to tell me something about football," and added that Paddock is "a track man."

Paddock, in his attack, called attention to the fact a football coach is judged by results and Jones is not getting results. He added the Jones "system seems to have been overworked with rival coaches knowing more about it than Jones himself."

B. C. Mentor Demotes Regular Players

By Walter Kiley

A bad fellow to mess around with, this "Dinny Mac" McNamara. And one who means what he says and has the courage of his convictions to back up his threats.

New John R. was terrifically disappointed in the showing of his Boston College Eagles in the defeat at the hands of Fordham.

He made no bones about so saying.

The up-shot of it all is that the biggest gridiron of changes in Boston College history has already gone into effect. So that six newcomers will be seat into starting action against the Mid West's great Michigan State Spartans on Saturday. While the supposedly veterans rest their hearts out on the substitute bench.

A shake-up had to come.

For College has the make-up of a fine team. It has the players possessing all the ability. It has capable reserves.

But something has been lacking

Lack Spark

That something can be definitely termed the "spark."

A spark is what the Boston coaches now seek. They hope to find it in the rearrangement of varsity teams which finds promotions and demotions liberally sprinkled throughout.

Major first team personnel changes find Oscar Gilman, 212-pound tackle, taking over for Ted Galligan on the right side of the line. Beside him is be Junior Paul Sweeney, ex-R. C. High star, who has won, through fight and aggressiveness, Sophomore Ray Presault's right guard berth.

Sophomore Kissell, 185-pound protege of Pete Chouinard of Nashua, N. H., gets his chance at center, where the increased weight gives him the call over the hard-working Vin Keough.

Jim Cahill goes back to left end, Paul Flaherty, Woburn's passing and kicking all-around backfield man, is to replace Tom Brennan as signal caller. He will be in there at the No. 4 back position. And Pat Avery of Plymouth, N. H., and St. Anselm's Prep gets his big chance to prove whether he is ever to make the grade.

Here are the teams that McNamara has named as the polishing up processes start for the intersectional game:

	First Team	Second Team
le	Urbinis	Rutkowski
lt	Gilman	Galligan
lg	Sweeney	Perreault
c	Kissell	Keough
rg	Pazonny	Keaney
rt	Dominick	Januzis
re	Cahill	Cash
qb	Flaherty	DiNatale
lhb	Ferdenzi	Guinea
rhb	Avery	Tuttilini
fb	Bryan	Huxley

These are the teams that have heard a real old-fashioned riot act read to them by their new head coach.

They have listened to him tell how Notre Dame beat Kansas 25-7 and how this same Michigan State team came along and beat Kansas 42-0.

They have also heard him insist that no Boston College team has ever been badly beaten on the gridiron of Alumni Field, A 20-7 victory by Villanova was the worst. Holy Cross and Fordham's winning margins have been limited to one touchdown.

Therefore he has pointed out in a voice which brooks no argument, that this 1935 Boston College team must and will produce this Saturday—or else.

And Dinny Mac leaves his promise dangling in the air, allowing the Eagles to supply their own interpretations.

NEWMAN GETS RAISE

The real reason Harry Newman is back with the New York Giants is because they met his salary demands . . . He now gets as much as Ken Strong and everybody is happy . . . The boys who ought to know say a man can cop in this year's rootin', tootin' Minnesota eleven are Ed Widseth, 215-pound tackle and Glenn Seidel, end-plus-and quarterback . . . They say Widseth is another Bronk Nagurski, who always is tackled then shifted to fullback . . . He was the big reason the highly touted Harvard Crimson ran up a net loss against the Gophers.

TUFTS Crippled For MIDDLEBURY

Several changes in the Tufts starting lineup against Middlebury next Saturday afternoon at the Tufts Oval will be necessary because Hamlin can't present a complete eleven for the game.

With Captain Jack Randall on the sidelined list for two weeks with two broken ribs, Coach Manly is taking Ralph Smith, first string tackle and converting him to a guard. He plans to use Kyrios and Zimman at tackle.

Roger Keith is nursing several bruises which have become quite painful, and in scrimmage Wilfred Hamlin is filling in. Olde Borden is replacing the injured Charlie Foberg at fullback, and may even win back his former regular berth if either Keith or Foberg is unable to play this coming game.

With the changes in the line necessary, more are expected to complete a new combination which will be able to cope with the rangy Vermont boys. Middlebury will be eager to give the Jumbos their second stricket defeat.

BANK DEPOSITS

Show HUGE Gain

By B. C. Forbes

America had $44,771,-000,000 bank deposits on December 31, 1934. This was an increase of no less than $6,773,000,-000 over June 30, 1933.

And they have risen further this year. (Government postal saving deposits have fallen below $1,200,000,000.)

Observed the head of one of America's very largest banking institutions to me yesterday:

The politicians haven't been able to sell the American public the idea that American bankers are all crooks. Bank deposits have been increasing by hundreds of millions, yes, by billions.

"The money isn't coming only from those having deposits of $5000 or less, which are insured.

"Isn't this convincing proof that Washington, despite all its mud-slinging, hasn't made Americans believe that bankers are soulless, heartless fellows not to be trusted?"

He went on:

"You know and I know that, while bankers, like everybody else, made mistakes of judgment and were carried away by optimism during the boom, not one banker in a hundred has been found guilty of stealing the people's money or any other criminal act.

"We know that the great majority of all banks which failed were institutions in smaller communities, particularly agricultural communities, where the bank officers went too far in trying to help out their clients.

"Not one of the very largest banks in the United States had to close its doors."

He added:

"It has been the same with our foremost industrial and other enterprises. The biggest of them have come through these cruelly trying times without resorting to bankruptcy.

"For a time Washington seemed to succeed in convincing the people that most bankers and other men of affairs were not to be trusted. But such mud-slinging is no longer effective, as is proved by the notable gains in bank deposits—not only from our own people but from foreigners—as well as by the investment-buying of corporate bonds and stocks at rising prices."

"If the politicians had succeeded in convincing the American people that the bulk of their bankers, industrialists, utility and railway leaders were crooks, obviously the logical thing would have been for the people to demand that politicians be allowed to carry out their ambition to bring everything under their control and operation.

STOCK PRICES ARE IRREGULAR

Rail Shares Feature

New York, Oct. 16—Heavy profit taking put only a temporary dent in today's stock market as the rails and scattered specialties got behind the list with strong support.

The flood of offerings of recent industrial climbers at the opening again caused the ticker tape to drop behind floor transactions. Selling piled up later, however, and early declines of 1 to 3 points were pared or cancelled.

Despite the irregularity, a number of new highs for the year were scored.

Setbacks in conspicuous leaders were attributed almost wholly to technical influences. There was said to have been a little more short selling than usual.

General economic improvement was seen as the basic market influence and bullish forecasts predominated in the financial sector. War news failed to disturb particularly. Grasping were a bit backward, but cotton firmed. Rail bonds took a turn for the better. Foreign exchanges were irregular.

Shares of Union Pacific rallied 4 points and Pullman, Spiegel-May-Stern and Celanese were up 2 each.

Gainers of fractions to a point or so included N. Y. Central, Santa Fe, Delaware & Hudson, Great Northern, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Anaconda, Kennecott Copper, American Can, Eastman Kodak, Industrial Rayon, Schenley, Western Union, American Telephone and Consolidated Gas.

Pressure on Chrysler was pronounced, but this favorite came back smartly to regain most of its early loss. Case dropped a point.

The flurry in carrier equities was attributed to various factors. Recent selling of Union Pacific, based apparently on fears for the dividend, was reversed by reports that the road expected to earn about $5.50 for the full year and that, under the circumstances, the directors would order the regular disbursement to stockholders.

Early estimates of freight carloadings for the past week—the official figures will be published Friday—place the total at around 750,000 cars. This would be the highest aggregate since October, 1931, and would compare with 706,877 in the previous week and 635,639 in the like week of 1934.

While it was thought that the changed earnings statements of some corporations had already been discounted to a certain extent, these continued to make important reading in the board rooms.

Among the latest were: Westinghouse third quarter, net profit of $2,557,500 or 96 cents a share, against a loss of $332,100 in the same period last year. Du Pont: $1.48 a share in the September quarter against $1.24 last year; Caterpillar Tractor, 9 months, $2.29 against $1.56 in the 1934 period

Higher Profit

Sutherland Paper Co. reports for quarter ended Sept. 30, 1935, net profit of $182,281, equal to 64 cents a share on the 287,000 shares of $10 par, against $131,269, or 45 cents a share, in September quarter of 1934.

Earnings

American Window Glass Co. reports for first nine months ended Aug. 30, 1935, net loss of $221,370, against net loss of $186,523 in preceding year

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Nightmare in China

Twenty Men Behind a Barricade—Waiting to Be Butchered

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

All right, Sarge—come on up here. Boys and girls, this is Sergeant Gilman J. Gates of 39 Whitehall street, New York city. Shake hands with him—push over one of those G. I cans for him to sit on, and make him at home in the Adventurers' Club because he belongs here now. He's the new member.

Sergeant Gil has a lot of yarns under his hat, gathered during his 25 years in the army. But here's his best one—the story of the incident that gave him the biggest scare of his life—the tale of the time when only a little psychology stood between him and a hideous death.

It seems in 1912 there was a little trouble in China, and a transport loaded with American troops was sent up from the Philippines to protect Americans who were in danger in the interior. Company C, 15th Infantry, was in that bunch, and Gil Gates was in Company C, 15th Infantry. The Americans were sent out in detachments of about 20 men, to relieve the English troops, who were already there guarding various centers along the Chinese railway, and Gil landed, with 19 other men, at the village of Wali, which, if I remember rightly, is in Chihli province, North China.

They had been there for several days, when, one evening, a Chinese coolie came panting into the little railroad station and told Tsai, the telegrapher, that a gang of bandits were on the march, and he had overheard them say they would attack the Americans at Wali and get the rifles and the supply of ammunition they had on hand.

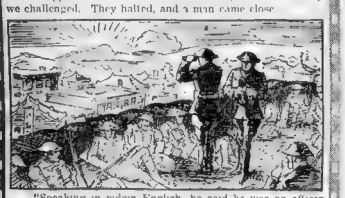
The Americans knew they were in for trouble. The bandits, estimated to be 1500 strong, were fully armed and would make short work of 20 men. But the 20 weren't going to take it lying down, either. They went to work filling boxes with sand to make a breastwork on the top of the flat-roofed station. In the meantime, the lieutenant in charge sent out Chinese runners to keep him informed of the band's approach.

He tried, too, to get word through to General Wang, a loyal Chinese soldier who had about 15,000 well-paid and well-disciplined Chinese troops at Kai Ping, about 15 miles east of Wali station. But the bandits had blown up the tracks about half-way between Kai Ping and Wali and had cut the telegraph wires.

There wasn't a man in that little detachment who didn't think he was doomed. Chinese bandits don't give quarter, and any prisoners they take are butchered on the spot. The lieutenant ordered the men each to write a letter to his sweetheart, wife or mother, telling her just what a predicament he was in. Those letters were to be given to Tsai, the telegrapher, who was to try to get through the lines to the south, take up a position on a hill and watch the Americans' flag with field glasses. In the morning, if the flag wasn't there, he was to mail the letters.

About 10 o'clock that night, the bandits came up and camped about half a mile from the station. "We expected they would attack us soon," Gil says, "or at least in the early hours of the morning." Two scouts were sent out. One reported that the bandits were bedded down for the night, but the other didn't return at all. We waited for him for two hours and then settled down to watch for trouble.

"None of us could sleep, and all of us had the shakes, although none of us would admit we were scared till it was all over. I think it was about 2 o'clock that we saw a body of men approach from a different direction, and immediately we challenged. They halted, and a man came close



"Speaking in pidgin English, he said he was an officer from General Wang's army, with a body of men to protect us from the bandits. According to his story, our lost scout had managed to get through to Kai Ping with the news. We asked him how many men he had, and he said: 'I have 80 men in my command and am ready to take over the defense.'

Well, so that didn't sound right. It didn't seem natural that General Wang would send such a puny force to fight 1500 men. The lieutenant suspected a trick, and told the officer to withdraw his men 100 yards from the station and not come near again. But it wasn't long before then began to see the point of that as all Chinese do. They drew back 100 yards and started a ring of huge bonfires around the station. Then they began playing bugles and drums.

Every man in the detachment was either a bugler or a drummer. They made a noise like a huge army. And that's what the bandits must have believed they were. At any rate, a scout came in about daylight and reported that the bandits had broken camp and started off in the opposite direction, and that's the last Gil ever saw of them.

In the morning the Americans broke out their supply of rations and feted the Chinese in royal style. They learned then that General Wang had found it impossible to get a larger force through that night, and had used the only means he could devise to beat the bandits off.

Later in the same day, Tsai, the telegraph operator, came back to the station and returned the letters the boys had written. "It's the only time in my 25 years of army service," says Gil, "that I felt sure my time had actually come."

Well, Gil's time didn't come on that trip, but yours, boys and girls, has. I mean, your time has come to set down the facts of that adventure of yours and send them in to me. Hurry it along, now.

And tomorrow BERNARD BUMPUS of WAREHAM tells of exciting adventure when he ran to rescue a friend collecting money.

BOSTON IN PORT RATE BATTLE

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 16—Hearing on rate differentials for United States ports before Interstate Commerce Commission Examiners Charles M. Bardwell and G. O. Basham were concluded today. Briefs will be submitted by all parties not later than December 16.

James F. Dougherty, representing Michigan pulpwood interests, protested the proposed Albany port commission rate scale as unfair.

Walter W. McCoubrey of the Boston Port Authority called the Albany proposals "arbitrary, unfair and unsound."

McCoubrey asserted that before any rates were granted to Albany the ICC should make a survey of all ports differentials.

Hugo Oberg, a rate expert of Washington, appearing also for Boston Port Authority, said if the proposed Albany rates were applied, differentials as applied to other ports would result in increases and decreases in existing rates, giving some ports advantages over other ports not now enjoyed.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1935

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

The Forty-eight States

Master, NOT Servant

IN the creation of an Interstate Crime Commission the individual States which make up the United States have at last begun to realize and exercise their sovereignty.

Conferring among themselves, they have TURNED AWAY from the new belief that as States they are powerless and that the Federal Government at Washington shall be allowed to usurp these apparently abandoned powers.

They HAVE NOT been abandoned, they WILL NOT be abandoned, the Constitution DOES NOT allow them to be abandoned.

It is the STATES, not the Federal Union, which is the SOURCE OF ALL POWER, and if some of our political tub-thumpers would only realise that there would be less loose and DOWNRIGHT IGNORANT proposals for tinkering with the machinery of government.

THIRTY STATES sent representatives to the conference at Trenton, N. J., at which the Interstate Crime Commission was created. The others will eventually join.

The Commission will prepare and submit TO THE STATES uniform legislation which will make State boundaries elastic and not rigid.

When this legislation is passed BY THE STATES, criminals will no longer be able to flee from one and find sanctuary in another.

Important witnesses, now practically immune in another State, will promptly be handed over to the State which wants them.

In short, each State will act in concert with the others. But they will act as STATES and not as conquered provinces, existing only in name.

At the conference Governor Hoffman of New Jersey succinctly said:

"There are some who suggest that crime control be placed wholly in the hands of the Federal Government. Respect for State sovereignty could not long endure if this important function of government be handed over to Washington."

First the PEOPLE and now the STATES have answered.

On Guard, America!

Beware of False Security

STATE AUDITOR THOMAS H. BUCKLEY deserves special credit for a stirring appeal for Americanism, made in an address before the State American Legion Auxiliary this week.

In a searching sizing up of European nations which would entangle us in the League of Nations and kindred affiliations, he warned:

"With their selfish protestations of friendship is coupled our remembrance of the thousands of the finest American youths sacrificed that the countries of Europe might benefit through land takings, through increased revenue, and remembrance of the unpaid war debts. Those debts today, a burden on the American taxpayers, are being used as the funds to pay for the present conflict.

"Let us not be lulled into false security by the neutrality stand of our President. Let us guard our American principles and be prepared to defeat any effort made by European countries to bring us into participation in their quarrels."

Mr. Buckley also made a spirited call for war against the Red menace.

"Communism, that insidious force which destroys religion, the home, the very foundations of government, must be met and conquered," he pointed out.

All good Americans share this sentiment.

But real activity will be forthcoming just as soon as the general public is thoroughly aroused.

Election Result

It's a Warning

The result of the special election in the second Essex senatorial district yesterday is chiefly significant in that it continues recent political trends.

Rhode Island and Connecticut have in the past few weeks registered disapproval of the Saw Deal in no uncertain fashion.

The swing of thousands of votes to William R. McSweeney in the second Essex senatorial district yesterday was merely another recording of voter dissatisfaction.

That party lines were sharply drawn was evidenced throughout the campaign, hotly waged on both sides.

And it is reasonable to believe the great body of voters expressed at the polls their PARTY preferences without special regard to attempts to raise purely local issues.

There is still time for Washington to heed these warnings from the polls.

There is still time for the Administration to redeem the solemn pledges of the Democratic platform.

But will it do so?

What do YOU think?

Boston in the Lead

Dog Lovers, Read This

Secretary Johns of the British Canine Defense League, visiting Boston, finds the Angell Memorial Hospital is the biggest and best equipped animal haven in the world.

"We have nothing like this hospital in England," declared Mr. Johns.

Praise like this is praise indeed.

And may well delight all New England humanitarians whose gifts and interest have made it possible.

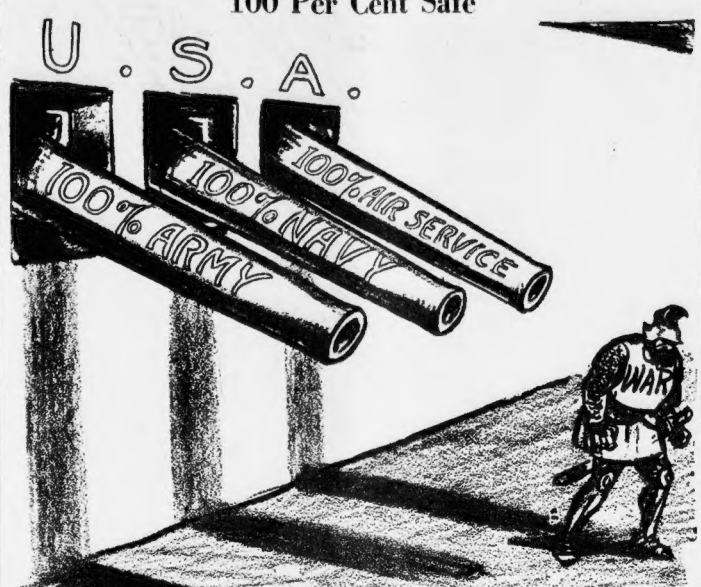
Work and Wages

Increase

The Massachusetts State Department of Labor and Industry spreads cheer with its finding that reporting trade organizations have increased both their payrolls and the number of employes.

As long as this index continues to swing upward, we are making real progress on the path back to prosperity.

100 Per Cent Safe



If America had been inveigled into the League of Nations, we would now be involved in Europe's warlike politics.

By keeping out of foreign entanglements we have kept America out of wars.

Beyond that, we must be able to keep foreign wars out of America, and PREPAREDNESS is the only policy that will do so.

A Navy equal to the best, an Army up to the strength prescribed in the National Defense Act, and an invincible air force will be our best assurance of unbroken peace.

America a Refuge

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

A friend of mine, a physician, whose work occasionally occupies him in the immigration service, tells me that an increasing number of Europeans are seeking American citizenship to escape the doom of murderous war in European countries.

French chmen, especially, he said, were for the first time in ages being jolted out of their age-old insularity and seeking citizenship in America.

I was unable to find verification for this, as such basic reasons do not necessarily appear on immigration papers.

But there was an unofficial and more or less sotto voce agreement that many highly intelligent Europeans, many former war veterans among them, were knocking at our gates, and that it was entirely plausible that they were looking for a "better 'ole" among the nations.

IN LAND OF PEACE

Arthur Hamilton Gibbs, famous British author, and gallant trouper of the Ninth Lancers, the road to full American citizenship at his home, "The Highlands," at Middleboro in Massachusetts.

He says war is a dirty and murderous business and he is happy to be in a country flanked by a couple of wide oceans and, all present trends considered, disposed to mind its own business.

He makes it clear that, so far as he is concerned, England can fight her next war without his connivance. He has done his share and is happy to be in America.

Benito Cimbalo, an enthusiastic American citizen, once of Il Duce's realm, says no man really can appreciate or properly value American citizenship unless he has lived under the haunting fear of war which hangs over Europe.

"Ever since 1914 Europe has been a nightmare," said Mr. Cimbalo. "It has been two years since I was there, on a visit, but even then, before the present war fever, the whole continent was jittery with fear.

"Mark my words, the airplane, aerial bombs, poison gas, tanks and machine guns have done more to make world peace not only possible, but quickly attainable than all the peace propaganda in the world.

"It simply boils down to the fact that human beings cannot and will not stand the unspeakable devastation and horror of modern implements of war. Life simply cannot go under such conditions.

"There may be one more great holocaust, but I am convinced it will be the last. Men will not go on building homes, rearing children, under the always hovering shadows of death, misery or ruin.

"I was just old enough to witness the last years of the World War, although I was not in action. They were just beginning to get effective action with tanks and airplanes.

PEACE IN AMERICA

"I have talked to many war veterans since, many of whom sought and found safety and peace in America, and they told me they would rather kill themselves than submit to the agony and degradation of a machine war, vastly augmented in horror with the technical advance of the post-war years.

"I don't think Americans fully understand what a priceless thing is their citizenship in this magnificent country. We have not only our isolation, but we have endless resources. We can live and work and bring up our families in peace, under free institutions.

"And, with just ordinary sanity in our international relations, there is no remote reason for our ever getting in trouble with any other nation.

"I am sure of one thing. America, in formulating a clear, emphatic and affirmative peace policy, will have unbounded support from former European citizens who have sensed on their minds and hearts a memory of war and the fear of war.

"I have had American citizenship only three years. I only wish I had wider experience and authority to make myself heard as proudly and fervently as I cherish my status as an American."

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Oct. 16—They are madly fanning the scattered embers of Broadway in hope of a flame that will again become The Great Blaze. Men and women to whom the street means a livelihood will tell you the depths have been reached and Broadway is on the upbound.

They profess to believe it will again become the boulevard of boulevards, the light-hearted stretch once a definite part of the national consciousness—a playground with the finest of cafes, theatres and sundry frolicsome relaxations. That is their chant.

O. O. McIntyre

But such optimism is not visible even for spurts such as engendered by the Baer-Louis scrap. The fact is that Broadway has dwindled to a catch-penny tawdriness with all the brightness preceding coma. It must be cleansed of carnival tempo and honky-tonk blatancy.

It has no class restaurants such as Reeter's, Schanley's and Churchill's. Gone are such theaters as the Criterion, Globe and Gaiety as once flourished. No more hotels like the Knickerbocker or Astor, night clubs like Rustanoby's. Only the shell remains.

Perhaps Broadway's decadence is largely due to the process of reasoning that Wilson Mizner used to delight in telling. One of his hard boiled cronies once observed with great earnestness: "That's me. I always try to deal legitimate, especially at first!"

A few hardy-gurdys—one under my window now—are left despite promises of banishment by a municipal decree some time ago. To many from the outland the barrel-organ is as big city as the two wheeled Victorias that circle the park.

There is a blending of old world industry and peasant obsequity about the impresarios—one grinding out tunes and the other bowing, scraping and smiling for tossed coins. It might not be music, but it beats most of the street cacophony about which nothing is ever done—save talk.

On the now busy Hippodrome corner a one-armed shoe shiner does the best business among his guild. His lightning dexterity, uncorking bottles with his teeth, flipping rags and carrying on a running conversation is a show in itself.

He claims to have been born in Ethiopia and lost his arm from infection following a camel bite.

True or not, a good story from a good locale at the moment.

Arrangement in black and white. A coal black copper in Harlem handing a ticket to a white motorist whose car bore an Alabama license plate.

Incidentally, Harlem's bon-ton ledge, Sugar Hill, received fresh social impetus, being the scene of the wedding of Joe Louis. There is rivalry between The Hill and Striver's Row, where Florence Mills and Paul Robeson used to live, to the southward.

Where Duke Ellington and Cab Calloway, the jazz conductors, cook apartments on Edgecombe avenue or Sugar Hill it noticed that "dicty" status higher, but with only taking his bride there the eclipse of Striver's Row was complete. Louis, by the sheer magic of his prowess, becomes automatically the colored social leader in both New York and Chicago.

And, of course, Louis' bride made a hit with almost everybody riding home from the fight on a street car.

Psychiatrists do not recommend the mystery and detective novel for mental relaxation for the high strung. I have a few friends who just came from one. He was told to get a copy of Gibbon's "Rome." And read it during a jet of the jimmies. The classic has become a general prescription.

Just when a columnist feels he might be making the grade he is likely to receive a twittering letter such as this that gums up the works: "Your writing is oftimes redolent of squitter-squatter, stippled with silvered chit chatter rags. A sort of echolal spume of satirically carbonated scat.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

A cure for the Depression. A better plan for Relief. We wondered if You had one. Asked. And are still trying to dig ourselves out from under. Evidently, every inhabitant of those United States has a moth-proof, air-tight, triple riveted scheme for Saving Anything. Anywhere. Anyhow. And you'd be surprised to know how many of them make plenty sense.

Elsie Robinson

Dearest of all to the average heart seems to be the well-known BACK TO THE LAND MOVEMENT. Ruth Keller, of Main street, Houston, Texas—and several thousand more—are sure it's the Perfect Answer. I WONDER. Read some of Ruth's suggestions and then decide for yourself.

"Old-fashioned Community Centers can be entirely self-supporting," says she. "I was raised on a 20-acre tract along with eight healthy, happy, fat sisters and brothers, and I know what magic there is in the soil. It fed us all and it would feed our unemployed millions. Run things by the 'swap' system.

"Let the dairyman, poultryman, seamstress, musician, shoemaker, druggist, carpenter exchange their talents, produce and service for that which he does not produce. Loafers? Parasites? Work. Or else—!"

Sounds alluring, doesn't it? If you need further inducement, here's a statement by Mr. Arthur Brisbane, written while he was visiting at McCloud, far up in the California timber wilderness:

PLENTY FOR ALL

"Life goes happily up in the village of McCloud, even though it is, to every Communist's wrath and confusion, owned and operated by the lumber company. No idleness, no poverty—plenty of all pleasant things for those who are willing to hustle.'

Why not more towns like that Mr. Brisbane wonders. And continues:

"Out here, and in the millions of unused acres between the Pacific and the Atlantic, there are farms, homes, room, opportunity for five times our present population. Perhaps, some day, men will contrive to use wisely and unselfishly what they have, instead of longing and fighting for what they never will have."

A fascinating picture. Suppose the federal government got behind it. Offered to put YOU "back on the land." Would YOU like it?

You look at me with amazement, possibly indignation. Why should ANYONE dislike such a life? Why, indeed? But, believe me, they do. As anyone who has spent most of his life in the "deep" country, as I have, knows to his grief.

There's nothing the average American states on more enthusiastically than life in the Wide Open Spaces. And there's nothing he departs from with more frantic speed than that same L. I. T. W. O. S. How do I know? Because, stranger, I've been the host for about 9426 such Nature Lads and Lassies.

Given paved roads, modern plumbing, swell food, swimming pools, plenty of movies, beauty shops, pool halls, electric fans and refrigerators, radios, teeming trout brooks not more than one-quarter of a mile away, and nothing to do, and the average American is Simplee Wild about the Beautiful Country.

For about 48 hours.

But after that—they all have a date with the dentist. Or an important business conference. Or an attack of "those funny pains that maybe are appendicitis."

LOVELY ON PAPER

Am I kidding? I am not. I'm just telling. Telling what every real country man or woman knows to be gospel truth. Nothing listens lovelier on paper than a Back to the Land Movement.

BUT TRY 'N' DO IT! Even if you could get the money—which isn't any kindergarten game—how are you going to make them go wilderness? Or having gone, how make em stick?

The men? Maybe. A few of them. But to the average woman the loneliness, monotony, drudgery and dreariness of ranch life is unthinkable.

Moreover, if the country-born, with generations of ranch life in their veins, can't make a success of it, what do you suppose the weak, wizened spawn of tenements and back alleys would do when confronted with a thousand square miles of uncurried scenery chuck-full of blights, on—let's have 'em!

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

TAKE IT FROM EVE

Too many men are apt to regard marriage as a dictatorship, instead of as a partnership; and too many women are inclined to look upon it as a graft, instead of as a job.

Helen Rowland

"Whether her kitchen is large or small, a woman always finds something in its size to brag about," says a bachelor. "and the same thing applies to her figure."

Women have always been branded as the "gabby" sex; and there is also a large percentage of men who know how to keep a secret—in circulation.

Love is what makes a woman want to scratch a man's eyes out, when he lets them linger too long or too admiringly on another woman.

When a girl's kisses are so easy or so plentiful that a man's fervor gradually sinks into mere tolerance, you may be sure that she has never heard of the "law of diminishing returns."

It's getting so that drawing an offer of marriage out of a man is like extracting a cork from a bottle. It requires skill, luck and lots of patience; and, even then, you may succeed in getting it out only a little bit at a time.

Love is like a taxicab. The more you flag it, the more likely it is to go right past. Stand still and look the other way, and it will probably run over you.

Many a girl is pounding a typewriter instead of wearing a wedding ring, simply because she could not refrain from yawning when a man was right in the midst of a beautiful bit of autobiography.

What some masculine writers don't know about women would fill a big book—and often does.

Isn't It So?

Confidence and success go hand in hand.

Honor bought is dishonor.

We should never try to prove what nobody doubts.

Singer's Voice Gone

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE singer can't sing any more. She has been a beauty and a great favorite with the public.

She has been followed through the streets by unknown admirers.

She has had letters by the ton and flowers by the bushel.

She has known triumph and joyous success, and she has known envy and bitterness of heart, too, for no one can succeed in this strange world we've made for ourselves without stirring the bitterness of jealousy and envy.

The singer has known this all the way along the road.

She pretended not to see the envy and not to realize the jealousy, but she saw them and she realized them all the time, and sometimes she even got a sort of primitive joy out of them.

"I really must be rather unusual," she said to herself, "or they wouldn't all be trying to hard to make a failure of me."

Then she would laugh, learn a new song, get a crowd of admirers and give her heart away piece by piece, as if it were an artichoke in June.

But now she is through singing, and I'm afraid she is rather sad about it.

She is no longer young and she is no longer pretty. But I don't thing that worries her very much. What she hates is to have her voice go.

I do hope the singer whose song is sung won't let herself get mean, and small and envious.

I hope she will gather young people around her and teach them how to sing and act, and how to laugh and be friendly.

Then she can let the rest of the world roll by.

But if she is foolish enough to make herself a target of ridicule by trying to pretend she can still sing, or if she is small enough to be jealous of those who really can sing, why, then, life really is over with her, isn't it?

She has such a glorious chance now to show what she really is.

America Leads Nations

By James T. Williams, Jr.

tion by an arbitral tribunal cases that have been definitely passed upon by our Supreme Court.

"We have arbitrated our treatment of aliens in times of war and in times of peace. We have likewise arbitrated the treatment of our own citizens by other governments in times of peace and in times of war.

"We have never refused arbitration with any nations of conciliation where diplomacy had definitely failed."

"We have proclaimed our adherence to the principle of arbitration, not alone by actually arbitrating, but by entering with other countries under special treaties and conventions . . . but also by negotiating with other countries general treaties of arbitration providing for like adjustment of future disputes."

This is only a part of this record of devotion on the part of the United States to the peaceful method of settling disputes. We are also the only great power in the world without any land armament, all but completed; disarmed, and that has made at the same time any substantial and actual reduction as to sea armament except in paper navies.

In the light of this record it is an insult to the United States for any alien intriguer or his domestic tool or stooge to pretend that the American people had lagged behind other nations in the promotion of peace.

The leadership of the United States in the cause of peace has been made possible by keeping the United States free from "entangling alliances" with any portion of the foreign world by keeping out of the League of Nations and the League Court.
